STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Celebrating 75 years of scholarship, workmanship, and fellowship, the Penn State Dairy Science Club hosted its 75th annual Dairy Exposition last weekend. The event culminated with the awards banquet held at the Days Inn in State College.

As Dr. Lawrence Muller, professor of dairy and animal science and adviser for the club, said, "If you look down over the list of dedicatees and distinguished alumni this club has honored during the past 75 years, you could write a fairly large book on their accomplishments and contributions to the dairy industry and agriculture."

Jeff Harding was named Dairy Exposition Dedicatee. A 1981 graduate of Penn State, Harding was raised on a Guernsey farm in western Pennsylvania. He served as president, cheesebox chair, and spring trip chair while a member of the Dairy Science Club.

After graduation, Harding returned to the family farm. He worked from 1985 to 1992 as director of sales for the Pennsylvania Holstein Association. Since 1993, he has worked for Monsanto Dairy Business. Harding lives on a Pennsylvania Century Farm just outside of State College.

During his acceptance speech, Harding encouraged club members and guests to "live long, love much, and laugh hard" because those things lead to success.

Harding thanked the club for the tremendous honor. "I am truly blessed and probably the luckiest man in all of Pennsylvania tonight."

This year's Distinguished Dairy Science Alumnus was Robert Rumler, who is the Chairman Emeritus of Holstein Association USA, Inc. Rumler received his bachelor's degree in dairy science with honors in 1936. After graduation, he served as assistant county agent for the University of Missouri until 1937. He then returned to Pennsylvania to become county agent for Lycoming County for eight years. From 1945 to 1948, Rumler served as assistant manager and editor in the ag promotion division for E.I. DuPont de Nemours and Co.

From 1948 to 1982, Rumler worked for Holstein Association USA, Inc., where he started as assistant executive secretary and chief operating officer. He quickly ascended to chairman. In 1982, he was awarded the title of chairman emeritus.

Rumler has received 13 distinguished service awards from various organizations. He was also the recipient of the International Person of the Year Award from World Dairy Expo and was named as guest of honor by the National Dairy Shrine.

During his acceptance remarks, Rumler congratulated the club for being the number MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Somebody told the bull about the steak he produced, and now the first and the last links in the beef production chain are beginning to form a circle of purpose. That purpose is focused on providing the consumer with consistency, quality, and verification.

In this emerging conception-to-consumer marketplace, the role of the feedlot is changing rapidly to reflect a greater uniformity of purpose and practice.

Cow/calf probers are beginning to take steps to position their small herds in a growing and consolidating marketplace. They're working together and agreeing on uniformity of management, genetics, health, and nutrition protocol. Such "all-

MECHANICSVILLE (Bucks Co.) — Every crop farmer knows how critical Class 1 soils can be to a good crop.

But producers who follow some basic erosion prevention strategies can make a difference in terms of crop yield with Class 2 and 3 soils.

Tom Trycieki, president of the Bucks County Farm Bureau, uses a combination of minimum and no-till strategies to make the most of the less-desirable soils on his conservation farm to ensure improved yields. Importantly, Trycieki noted, don't go into the fields too early in the spring and cause ruts and compaction.

"Be there when the soil is fit for you to plant," said the Bucks County Conservation Cooperator of the Year.

Trycieki farms more than 600 acres on all leased land with wife Susan and son Thomas.

Easter Greetings

At this sacred season of Easter the staff at Lancaster Farming wish for you and your family the faith and hope of new beginnings inherent in the observation of this religious celebration.

Tom Trycieki, 10-year president of the Bucks County Farm Bureau, began farming when he was a child. In 1985, the Bucks County Conservation Cooperator of the Year Award winner began farming full-time and still cares for some acreage in Buckingham Township owned by his uncle, Walter Trycieki. LAST WEEK	2693	1213
LAST YEAR	2533	1381

CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers closed .50-1.00 higher. Some weakness was noted early in the week, but prices advanced on Thursday's light offering despite light demand from Kosher buyers. Market strength came as beef packers continue to move dressed meat swiftly out the back door and boxed beef cut-out values continue to inch higher. Western feedlots traded cattle firm to fully 1.00 higher live and 1.00-2.00 higher dressed from 74.00-75.00 and 117.00-119.00. Local Holstein steer prices turned 1.00-2.00 higher with a boost from Thursday's attractive offering. Slaughter heifers were only lightly tested this past week. Slaughter cows closed .50-1.50 higher with the full advance placed on the leaner-type cow from 85-90 pct lean. Slaughter bulls ended the week steady to 1.00 higher. Supply included 35 percent slaughter steers, 5 percent slaughter heifers, 30 percent slaughter cows, 5 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1080-1505 lbs 71.25-75.85, few fancy singles up to 77.50; Choice 2-3

TREND: Compared to last week, feeder pigs sold 12.00-18.00 lower. Demand for feeders continues to be very good as the slaughter hog market outlook remains strong, but this week's competition from packers was much tighter with little time to take advantage of Easter demand. Around 52 percent of the total supply returned to feed. All pigs were weighed and graded on arrival and sold by the hundred weight.

National Grain Market

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Wheat bids were slightly higher, today, as this week's hot, windy weather caused some concern about winter wheat conditions in the western plains. Export sales were good this week but not up to trade expectations. Corn bids finished steady to slightly lower as recent rains have been scattered across the corn belt this week and early planting is under way. Fairly good export sales this week underpinned bids. Bean bids were mostly lower, pressured by slow export demand and lower corn bids. However recent heavy rains in the Midwest, limited declines. Wheat 1 cent higher. Corn steady to 2 cents lower. Sorghum 2 cents lower. Soybeans mostly steady to 2 cents lower.

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER

MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was seasonally slow to fair. Offerings were fully adequate to ample and in heaviest supply on the 2.5 pound sizes which were competitively priced in an effort to stimulate activity. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights remained irregularly light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate to moderately heavy. Several plants plan to close tomorrow Friday or Monday in observance of the religious holidays. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 56 to 68 cents. Trade sentiment was about steady. Bone-in breasts were readily available. Other cuts were adequate.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS BICENTENNIAL

Happy birthday to the Library of Congress! On April 24, 1800, President John Adams saw fit to set aside $5,000 to purchase books for use by the United States Congress. In the 200 years since then, the Library of Congress has grown to over 115 million items, housed on about 530 miles of bookshelves. Just a few highlights of the rare items include John James Audubon's Birds of America, a one-meter-high book of life-sized bird drawings, the world's largest comic book collection, a book called Old King Cole that is only 1/4 x 1/4 inch in size (about the size of a period), various presidential papers dating back to George Washington's term, and the Gutenberg Bible.

Books were my pass to personal freedom.

—Oprah Winfrey

TIP OF THE WEEK

To keep your bookshelves clear for new favorites, donate used books often to your local library.

OPINION

The Prophet's Easter Story

WHO hath believed our report? And to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not.

Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned everyone to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.

He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

He was taken from prison and from judgment; and who shall declare his generation? For he was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of my people was he stricken.

And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither, was any deceit in his mouth.

Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief; when thou shalt make his soul and offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand.

He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied; by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities.

Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death; and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bore the sin of many; and made intercession for the transgressors.

To Develop A Learning and Quality Initiative

To be successful in business today you need to develop a culture for your business. Recently, I came across several initiatives one of the county's leading agribusinesses has developed for their company. I believe these initiatives should be the part of the culture of all farms.

The Learning Initiative states "We must continually increase our learning ability as individuals and as an organization. We need to develop leaders to take our expertise to the next level of excellence. Our success depends upon individuals with high emotional quotients (EQ) working and sharing together. EQ are individuals who make sound decisions, admit their mistakes and put what is best for their peers and the organization ahead of their personal agendas."

The Quality Initiative states "We must embrace quality in all that we do. We believe our customers have two perceptions. We have a quality product and quality permeates our organization. However, quality and efficiency must go hand in hand. Greater accuracy and accountability, as required by the customer, will result in the need for higher levels of quality control.

To Understand The Food Chain

Developing alliances with customers and suppliers that form a food chain will be one of the most important decisions farmers will have to make over the next couple of years. Farms will need to be an integral part of the food supply chain. We will need to challenge ourselves to understand the needs of our suppliers and our suppliers' suppliers, our customers and our customers' customers. Farmers will need to partner with those who enhance the strategic advantage for the entire food chain of which they are a part. Then and only then will value be added to the entire food chain and enhancing the bottom line of that chain.

In the process, farmers must align themselves with suppliers and customers who think the way they think and focus on the same core values they do. The business of tomorrow must be able to assemble the strengths of many partners to become far more nimble and responsive.

To Develop An Environmental Initiative

One of the county's leading agribusinesses has established an initiative to be the leader in meeting environmental concerns. Stewardship is the individual's responsibility to manage his life and property with proper regard to the rights of others. They recognize the need to accept the responsibility and ownership for providing solutions to environmental problems.

Science is on our side. Through research and future discoveries, we will find different methods which will help solve the environmental challenges at hand. At the same time we, as an industry, need to do a better job educating the consumer of our stewardship efforts and our desire to improve the land and the environment. We will need to document our efforts in order to demonstrate our efforts are real and scientifically sound. Good stewardship is a commitment, a commitment which will lead us to the inevitable conclusion that one must develop and promote sustainable agriculture.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Together we can accomplish the unimaginable."

IBackground Scripture:

1 Corinthians 15.

Devotional Reading:

Romans 1 Corinthians 15:12-19,50-57

If there had been a television crew standing by on the first Easter, we would probably not have any clearer picture of what happened than we do now. The four Gospel writers each describe this experience differently as far as details are concerned. As I have said before, there is much confusion as to just what kind of body with which Jesus was resurrected—the same physical body as before? a different kind of body? a spiritual rather than physical presence? How can we decide what was the nature of the resurrected Lord when we get such different pictures? He walked with two disciples and they didn't recognize him until he broke bread with them—and then he disappeared before their eyes (Lk 24:13-32). "They took hold of his feet and worshipped him" (Mt. 28:9). When he came to the disciples in Galilee, "they worshipped him; but some doubted" (Mt. 28:17). When she first saw him in the Garden, "she did not know that it was Jesus" (Jn 20:14) and he told her not to touch him (20:17). Eight days after Easter, he appeared to the disciples in a room in which the doors were secured and then invited doubting Thomas to touch his wounds (20:27). In 1 Corinthians 9:1, Paul testifies, "Have I not seen Jesus our Lord?" and in 15:8, "Last of all, as to one untimely born, he appeared also to me."

Yet in Acts 9:3-6, that experience on the Damascus Road is described as "a light from heaven" and the voice of Jesus. ESSENTIALLY A MYSTERY I have never felt that I had to choose between any of the above, for the resurrection of Christ, I believe, is essentially a mystery that is related to the faith with which it is received by us. It cannot be reduced to a documentary, a formula or a repeatable laboratory experiment. Although all the witnesses to the resurrection give us different details, they are one in assuring us that the tomb was empty and they experienced the risen Lord! In 1 Corinthians 15 Paul is speaking of that witness to the resurrected Lord as the assurance of our own resurrection. Paul raises the very question raised above: "But someone will ask, 'How are the dead raised? With what kind of body do they come?'" (15:35). Unlike the Pharisees who believed that God would resurrect the actual physical bodies, Paul teaches us that the resurrected body will resemble the physical body, but be different—spiritual. "So it is with the resurrection of the dead. What is sown is perishable; what is raised is imperishable. It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. It is sown a physical body, it is raised a spiritual body" (15:42-44). A SPIRITUAL BODY? But what is a "spiritual body"—the two words together are a contradiction in terms! If it is a body it is not spiritual and if it is spiritual it cannot be a body. Paul does not leave us in doubt as to whether this is a resuscitated physical body: "I tell you this, brethren: flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, nor does the perishable inherit the imperishable" (15:50). Whatever it is, the "body" is not "flesh and blood."

So where does that leave us? Paul's "spiritual body" sounds like the best description of the indefinable experiences of the resurrected Christ. The victory over death that we share with Christ is not in a physical body, such as we inhabit today, nor in a spiritual mirage, but in a form or state which guarantees a continuity of consciousness and identity. So the power of the resurrection of Christ and ours is not in our ability to comprehend it, but to experience it here and hereafter. It can neither be proven nor disproven, but it is a reality which can be grasped by faith.

"Lo! I tell you a mystery," Paul tells us, a mystery that permits us to confess with him, "Death is swallowed up in victory...thanks be to God who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (15:54,57).

What to plant when there are four stomachs for every mouth you feed.

Want to plant alfalfa that produces higher tonnage for your herd? Chew on this. In university trials, DEKALB alfalfa varieties had an advantage of 200 lbs. of forage and 250 milk lbs. more per acre. That's $10 an acre more than the overall average of other brands in the trials.*

DK I24 Designed for areas where a three- or four-cut harvest system is common / winterhardy, persistent; a dormancy 2 variety / high resistance to Aphanomyces root rot / noticeably fast regrowth

DK I27 Well adapted to either a three- or four-cut system / excellent choice for fertile low ground, light soils and stress conditions / high resistance to Aphanomyces root rot / excellent regrowth and recovery rate

DK I34 Excellent disease resistance / high resistance to Aphanomyces root rot / persistent with excellent regrowth / very winterhardy for dependable performance over time

DK I40 Excellent winterhardiness and resistance compared with similar competitive varieties / excellent disease resistance rating / excellent regrowth rate / adapted to either a three- or four-cut system

CALVES SHEEP GOATS

LAST WEEK

CALVES Compared to Thursday's auction, there were not any lightweight calves sold for immediate slaughter. A thin test of larger slaughter calves sold firm. Holstein bulls returning to feed sold steady to 500 lower in a light test. Holstein heifers prices were mostly steady.

VEALERS Not tested

SLAUGHTER CALVES Few Good and Choice 200-350 lbs 80.00-109.00

RETURNED TO FARM Holstein bulls 90-125 lbs 122.00-145.00. Planer type bulls 80-115 lbs 90.00-130.00, weaker calves 70-85 lbs 35.00-95.00. Holstein heifers 80-100 lbs 290.00-370.00. Planer heifers 70-100 lbs 170.00-300.00.

SHEEP Compared to Thursday, slaughter lamb prices were firm with slaughter ewes and aged sheep trading unevenly steady. Receipts were very heavy for the Easter special and set a new record for sheep and goat numbers at New Holland. Buyers were very particular as to quality on both sheep and goats, resulting in the better stock selling higher and the planer types trading lower.

SLAUGHTER LAMBS Choice and Prime 2-3 25-35 lbs 150.00-225.00, 35-45 lbs 130.00-175.00, 45-80 lbs 105.00-135.00, 80-110 lbs 90.00-110.00, woolled 60-90 lbs 70.00-85.00. Good and Choice 1-3 25-45 lbs 100.00-125.00, 45-80 lbs 90.00-120.00.

SLAUGHTER EWES Good and Choice Yearlings and 2 year olds 35.00-70.00. Utility and Good 1-3 mostly 25.00-40.00, few fleshy down to 15.00 and thin up to 50.00.

GOATS (All sold by the head) Billies Large 100.00-125.00, few up to 135.00. Medium 75.00-100.00. Mutton Choice and Prime 60.00-80.00. Nannies Medium and Large 30.00-70.00. Yearlings Choice and Prime 60.00-80.00. Kids Choice and Prime 35.00-75.00. Good 10.00-35.00.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University
April 14, 2000

U.S. Economy Sends Mixed Signals

-Inflation index (CPI-U) up in March

-Wholesale inflation measure (PPI) more moderate

-Cheese and butter prices show further weakness

There is little news this week that will alter the outlook for depressed milk prices. The milk production report for March will be released Monday next week. Also, the cold storage report due Thursday will report cheese stocks.

Two reports were released this week, however, regarding the strength of the overall economy. That is very important to the U.S. dairy industry as it has a direct affect on demand. The first report issued on Thursday was for the March Producer Price Index. That index, known as the PPI, reflects a broad measure of the wholesale price for finished goods. It measures inflation at the wholesale level. The second report, issued today, was on the March Consumer Price Index (CPI). The CPI is a much-watched barometer for retail inflation.

Inflation is bad news for the U.S. dairy industry. If inflation goes up, so also will interest rates. The higher the interest rates, the less money consumers have in their pockets to spend eating out and buying milk and dairy products.

The PPI report released by the U.S. Department of Labor (<http://www.bls.gov/news.release/ppi.nr0.htm>) indicates March wholesale prices, seasonally adjusted, rose a strong 1.0 percent. Most of that increase was driven by high energy prices. However the core PPI rate, after removing volatile energy and food prices, rose a more modest 0.1 percent. The core rate met analyst expectations and cooled inflationary fears.

The CPI report, however, did little to allay fears of inflation. The March consumer price index for urban consumers (CPI-U), seasonally adjusted, rose 0.7 percent (<http://stats.bls.gov/news.release/pdf/cpi.pdf>). That is stronger than the 0.5 percent increase in February. For the 12-month period ended March 2000, the CPI-U was up 3.7 percent. Rising energy costs accounted for more than half the rise in the CPI for the second consecutive month. Again, the CPI is the federal CALVES: Compared to last week, veal calf prices were only lightly tested as the demand for farm calves continues to be very good. A light test of larger slaughter calves closed 1.00-5.00 higher. Buyers were desperate to fill orders on a very light week's offering of Holstein bull farm calves. Lack of supply is mostly due to the extremely hot temperatures at the time of conception for current new-born calves. Holstein bulls returning to feed sold 40.00-50.00 higher. Holstein heifer prices ended the week mostly 5.00 higher.

Penn State Dairy Science Club Celebrates

JAYNE SEBRIGHT

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)— About 30 Penn State students participated in this year's Dairy Exposition Fitting & Showing Contest, held at the Penn State Ag Arena last Saturday.

Show exhibitors were divided into three categories, amateur, intermediate, and professional, based on their level of showing and fitting experience. Within each division, participants were divided into classes of four and judge on both their showing and fitting abilities. In each division, the winners of each class competed for champion fitter and champion showman.

In the professional division, Steve Palveski, a senior from Gibson, received both champion fitter and champion showman. Tom Uber was named reserve champion fitter and reserve champion showman. Palveski was also named overall champion fitter, showman, and overall champion, while Uber received reserve overall champion fitter, showman, and overall champion.

Michelle Cornman earned both champion fitter and champion showman in the intermediate division. Reserve champion fitter and reserve champion showman both went to Mary Bamford.

In the amateur division, Ellen Angstadt was named champion fitter and reserve champion showman. Champion showman went to Laurie Bero, while Sara Organist received reserve champion fitter.

Judges for this year's show were John "Andy" Foster III and Terri Packard. Foster is a 1994 graduate from Penn State and a former Dairy Expo show chairperson. He currently works with his family on Globe-Run Farm and serves as the Central and Western Pennsylvania Territory Manager for Taurus Service, Inc.

Packard graduated from Penn State in 1993 and was also a Dairy Expo show manager. She was named overall champion of the Dairy Expo show in 1991. Currently Terri is involved in marketing, raising, and showing dairy cattle and owns a small business.

During the Expo show and other events, the club hosted a silent auction to benefit club activities. Old show memorabilia items having sentimental value to Penn State alumni were sold during the auction. The highest selling item was silver platter from the Pennsylvania Ayrshire Association honoring former judging team achievements. The platter went for $5,000.

one dairy science club in the country for the past several years.

"I have visited many clubs throughout the United States and can really appreciate what it means to be number one," said Rumler. "You young people have come to expect it, but I can really appreciate it, which makes me all the more honored to have received this award."

David Lentz, a 1994 graduate from Penn State, received this year's Young Dairy Leader award. Lentz served as club president, Dairy Expo chairperson, and Nittany Lion Fall Classic chair while he was a student at Penn State. He also received both the Davey Award, presented to the outstanding senior, and the Branding Award, presented to the outstanding junior.

Since graduation, Dave has worked as a regional representative for Holstein Association USA, Inc. He provides programs to members and non-members in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, Delaware, and West Virginia. He has also completed training in the Holstein Foundation's Young Dairy Leaders Institute.

Lentz thanked his many mentors who were in the audience at the banquet. He also attribute some of his success to Penn State's great Ivanhoe Star bull.

"When my parents went out of the dairy business in 1987, it was my Ivanhoe Star daughter, Katie, who kept my interest in dairy and got me where I am today," said Lentz.

Many students were recognized during the awards program. Heather Oberholtzer, a senior from Elizabethtown, received this year's William R. Davey award, presented to the outstanding senior in the club, and was named as Penn State's nominee for the National Dairy Shrine recognition program.

This year's August E. Branding award went to Curtis Beidel of Newburg. The award is presented to an outstanding junior who unselfishly gives their time and abilities to helping others and the club. Josh Hushon of Airville was named the Outstanding First Year Member of the club.

Awards were presented to students who served as chairpersons for the various events and activities that the club hosts during the year. After each award was presented, club president Diane Glock asked past chairs to highlight some memories from when they were in the club.

Graduating seniors were also recognized during the meeting. "We come together as always to celebrate the accomplishments of our seniors," said Muller. "This year's list of seniors is one of the longest we have had."

Janice Youse.

The Choice of Champions

Management Key To Success Of Franchise Operators, Parent Companies

COLUMBUS, Ohio - More than one-quarter of all new restaurants fail during their first year of business. About 60 percent fail within five years. Although many are independent operations, failures also occur with franchised restaurants.

One reason is that franchisees and their regional or national parent companies sometimes work at cross-purposes, said H.G. Parsa, associate professor of hospitality management at Ohio State University.

Parsa, who is housed in the College of Human Ecology, is known nationally for his research on franchise management practices. It's an area of study few researchers have focused on, although franchising accounts for nearly 41 percent of all retail sales in the United States, or $800 billion annually.

"Usually, franchising is the way to go," Parsa said. "In franchise systems, somebody has tested the product, and if something goes wrong, you have someone to talk to for some support."

However, most parent companies, or franchisers, make their money by taking a percentage of the revenue from individual stores as royalties, irrespective of those stores' expenses or profits, Parsa said. So, franchisers often like to increase sales, no matter what. On the other hand, the stores(franchisees) are interested in maximizing profits, or their revenue minus expenses. If a new product or service costs too much to provide to customers, stores might hesitate to offer it unless sales increase substantially.

When the goals of franchisers and franchisees collide, prudent management is key to success, Parsa said. In any franchise system, stores and the parent company each have some power, although the parent company has considerably more. How that power is wielded affects both store owners' satisfaction, and the eventual financial results for both franchiser and franchisee, Parsa said.

For example, in the early 1980s, Wendy's International decided to offer breakfast at its quick-service, or fast-food restaurants. The omelets, scrambled eggs, pancakes, and other breakfast items increased revenues, but also increased individual restaurants' expenses. The stores' extra outlay actually decreased their profits, even though the parent company was benefiting from the increased revenue.

What happened next was a classic case of using the wrong management style at the wrong time, Parsa said. Many franchisees quickly figured out that their own bottom line would be hurt if they offered the breakfast program, and they decided not to participate. That prompted the parent company to try to force franchisees into offering breakfasts, telling them to either do it "or take the sign down," Parsa said. The result? Some stores filed for bankruptcy, and the breakfast concept was eventually abandoned.

This scenario has the potential to be replayed whenever a parent company wants its restaurants to introduce a new product that might generate higher volume but yield a low profit margin, Parsa said. While such a heavy-handed approach can work when franchisers and franchisees are working toward the same goal, it wasn't a good strategy in this particular case, Parsa said.

Similar problems can happen when a franchise tries to grow too fast, Parsa said. For example, Subway experienced a high rate of franchisee turnover during a time of aggressive growth, while Arby's parent company suffered when stores were permitted to pursue individual goals at the expense of the whole system.

Wendy's chose a better method later in that decade, when it launched a buffet concept called the "Super Bar." Although many store owners hesitated because of the substantial capital investment necessary and the reduced floor space for customer seating, the parent company coaxed them into trying it by offering limited expert and financial assistance, allowing time delays in implementing the concept if necessary, and helping redesign dining areas to prevent loss of seating. This collaborative approach helped the Super Bar concept become a success until changing times brought the concept to a close.

Wendy's is now known as a franchisee-friendly parent company, Parsa said, as is McDonald's, Papa John's and other companies. In his studies of various franchises, Parsa has found the most successful are those in which both the parent company and individual stores financially perform at or above the industry average. He has found that in those cases, which he calls "Progressive Franchise Systems," the franchiser/franchisee system:

- Consistently makes adjustments to their products and operations to maintain a competitive advantage.

- Is proactive in its marketing activities.

- Understands the importance of franchise relations and

Northeast Order Uniform Price For March 2000 Announced

BOSTON, Mass. — Erik F. Rasmussen, market Administrator for the Northeast Marketing Area, has announced that the statistical uniform price for March 2000 is $12.39 per hundredweight or $1.07 per gallon for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, Massachusetts (Boston). The statistical uniform price is the benchmark minimum producer blend price paid to dairy farmers, prior to allowable deductions, for milk contain 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids. The price received by an individual dairy farmer will vary as the component composition of a farm's milk differs from the established benchmarks.

Rasmussen also stated that the producer price differential (PPD) for March is $2.85 per hundredweight for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, Massachusetts. The PPD represents each producer's share of the value generated by the marketwide pool on a hundredweight basis. The PPD, which is added to the payment producers receive for their milk's components, is adjusted for the location of the receiving plant. The statistical uniform price and PPD decrease by scheduled amounts the more distant the plant is from Suffolk County, Massachusetts. The March PPD is $2.75 in New York, New York, and $2.65 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

The Class prices for milk pooled in March are as follows: Class I, $14.09 (Suffolk County, Massachusetts); Class II, $11.71; Class III, $9.54; and Class IV, $11.00. Had the Northeast Order been in effect in 1999, comparable class prices for March 1999 would have been: Class I, $15.99; Class II, $13.47; Class III, $11.51; and Class IV, $12.56. The component values for March are protein, $1.9166 per pound; butterfat, $1.0191 per pound; other solids, $0.0424 per pound; and nonfat solids, $0.8553 per pound.

Milk receipts from producers totaled 2.182 billion pounds. Class I utilization, milk processed as beverage milk, was 42.0 percent of producer milk receipts. The average Class I utilization, for the three predecessor orders that were combined to form the Northeast Order, was 42.2 percent in March 1999.

The manufacture of Class II products such as cream, ice cream, yogurt, and cottage cheese utilized 17.6 percent of producer milk. Milk used to manufacture Class III products such as cheese (American and Italian) and evaporated and condensed products utilized 27.9 percent of total milk receipts. Class IV usage (butter, nonfat, and whole milk powder) equaled 12.5 percent of the total.

New Program Aims To Strengthen Pennsy

ances" are popping up across the country, and as close to home as the Virginia foothills and eastern Ohio.

With a little bit of teamwork, cattle feeders here in Pennsylvania can provide a missing link in the chain. In fact, they are the initial focus for the state's new program, "Blueprint for Success for Cattle Feeding in Pennsylvania."

In March, area cattle feeders and beef industry representatives convened to get the program details. Wendall Landis, who has hired in February as Pennsylvania's director of beef quality assurance certification, was introduced. Described as the state's new beef industry advocate and the beef producer's ultimate resource person, Landis' role as program director provides a one-stop shop for producer assistance with issues relating to both beef quality assurance and profitability.

"I'm a communication link, a liaison between the industry and the cattle feeder. I'm here to help get people and resources together, provide tools, and get information to help produce quality cattle profitably."

For instance, Landis said, he can facilitate teleconferences to link industry representatives and experts to tackle a problem, answer a question, or handle an issue. He stressed that he is looking forward to supporting the strengths and improving the weaknesses at the farm level and providing an outside objective opinion.

A committee cross-section of the industry, producers, extension, processing and allied agribusinesses met for more than a year to look at ways to strengthen Pennsylvania's $360 million a year beef industry and its producers.

The results are what the committee believes the state's cattle feeders "need to do ... to remain a viable part of agriculture in Pennsylvania and to help carry the industry in the next 10-20 years," said Dr. John Comerford, Penn State extension beef specialist. "This is not a one-year program, it's not a three-year program, this is a continuing process, and I hope you realize it's available now and in the future."

A joint initiative between Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and the Pennsylvania Beef Council, the Blueprint is an organized effort to begin and intensive one-on-one education program linked to a Ten-Point Benchmark for Quality Cattle in Pennsylvania. The primary objective is twofold: to increase the beef value of cattle fed in Pennsylvania through benchmarks and best management practices and to see the industry grow here by improving profitability.

The 10-point benchmark pinpoints sources of value, or ways of avoiding packer discounts at slaughter. These 10 points, explained Comerford, are independent of each other, because every cattle feeder is not going to meet all 10. For instance, the point dealing with cattle type doesn't mean to imply that a Holstein feeder can't be profitable. He can address other management and value issues on this list, said Comerford.

Paul Slayton, executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, touched on the role of checkoff dollars in the program. "We had meetings to determine if the program fit in for checkoff dollars. This is a consumer-driven, quality assurance project and the answer is an overwhelming 'yes'."

Pennsylvania's Blueprint program was presented to the Cattlemen's Beef Board in Denver, where the terminology was "tweaked" to reflect the consumer driven value objectives, said Slayton, adding that "it's going to be tweaked more, for new ideas and to continue to reflect where our efforts are best spent."

"The job is vast, but we've got an energetic, committed professional young man and we're releasing him today. He's going to provide you with the tools," Slayton said as he introduced program director Wendall Landis. With the 10-point benchmark as his guide, Landis said he will be instrumental in putting people together to troub-leshoot, problem-solve, and generally help answer producer question on everything from packing plant issues, to animal health issues, to feed management issues, even zoning and environmental issues.

During the meeting, Lancaster County livestock agent Chet Hughes said "there is a lot of expertise sitting in this room, and a network of people across the state. You may be the person Wendall will call for assistance, or you may be the person who will call Wendall for assistance."

Comerford and Slayton both stressed the importance of baseline information gathering for benchmarking purposes. The idea of goal-setting using benchmark comparisons is not a new one. The dairy industry has been compiling information for years through DHIA and other recording services which many producers use to compare themselves to a state or national average to reveal areas for improvement and goal-setting in their own enterprises. Information provided will be confidential and anonymous, and used only to calculate state averages so that individuals can compare their own progress, and so that the state's overall progress in areas of beef quality and profitability can be charted.

Slayton stressed the issues of quality assurance. "We're looking through the eyes of the consumer," he said. "We're aiming for a beef product that essentially exceeds what consumers expect in taste, price, color, safety, leanness, ease of preparation, and anything else important to them."

Slayton predicts that the results of the third beef quality audit being conducted by National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) this year will show continued movement of the industry toward eliminating the "outliers" to improve the averages which translates as consistency for the consumer. The 1995 audit revealed that beef was viewed as inconsistent with excess waste and problems with palatability and tenderness.

Slayton encouraged producers to focus on isolating and getting back the money they are losing because of quality issues. For instance, he noted that in Pennsylvania, one out of every five beef carcasses is outside of the ideal yield grade category of 3.5 or less; 11 percent weigh more than 900 pounds, 6 percent less than 600 pounds; 9 percent are no-rolls; 19 percent have ribeye areas greater than 15 or less than 11 square inches; and 22 percent had liver condemnations.

As far as quality grades, Pennsylvania does better than the national average; however, there is still a deficit between consumer demand for the branded beef products that come from these cattle and the number of carcasses which actually make the grade here.

This industry is positioned for exciting times, said Slayton, and he foresees greater utilization and consumer recognition of the NCBA industry "quality mark." State beef quality assurance programs are recognized to use the mark in Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, and Texas. Blueprint organizers want to see Pennsylvania on that list.

"We need to position ourselves for the changes coming along in the marketplace in order to be profitable," Comerford said, listing industry consolidation, ranch, to retail alliances, branded beef programs, and source identification as the harbingers of the future.

Beef value is determined by grade, finish, weight, sex, and color, Comerford acknowledged. However, grading is intended as a way to categorize products for commercial, not consumer trade. While USDA grading is respected worldwide, is nationally correlated, does an accurate job of predicting palatability, tenderness is becoming the next genetic and technological focus of the industry.

"The problems is, we don't know it's tender until it's dead, unlike marbling," he said, noting that Texas A&M researchers believe they have found the candidate genes for tenderness, "the pinpoint in the ocean that says these are the genes which influence tenderness, and that technology is up for sale. What happens when someone buys that technology, and puts their name on that product?" he said.

Comerford suggests that grading will continue to be used for verification of branded products; however, commodity beef will have less value on this market. "Producers will be asking themselves: 'If I'm not producing into one of these categories, who's going to buy my cattle?'" said Comerford. These programs prove that "It's not just beef, it's somebody's beef, a mark consumers can rely on."

Instead of focusing energy on the things they can't change, such as the market, Comerford encouraged producers to focus on taking steps at home first. "The difference, at any given time, between the most and least profitable steer in the feedlot is about $300," he said, holding a fist full of 300 $1 bills and counting them into piles according to nine profit centers associated with producing the typical 750-pound Choice steer carcass... or not. Profit, Comerford reminded the audience, is measured in the difference between return and cost. "Where's all the money? It's out there in your feedbunk and the decisions you make."

Northeast SARE Announces 2000 Producer Grants

BURLINGTON, Vt. - The Northeast Region Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) program has awarded a record $270,000 to 62 producers through its farmer Grant program.

SARE provides grants for experiments and demonstrations, including sustainable and innovative agricultural practices. While a number of farmer grants address production issues, a large number of the 2000 projects focus on marketing. In those projects, SARE support will help farmers explore new markets, test novel direct marketing approaches, create innovative producer associations, and tap into urban ethnic markets.

The emphases on marketing reflects a shift in focus of many small- and medium-sized farms, says SARE Program Manager Jim Gardiner. "It is a response to low commodity prices, and a growing sense that, especially in the heavily populated Northeast, there are many opportunities for alternative and niche markets."

This year, total funding available through Northeast SARE increased because of contributions from the USDA Agroforestry Center and the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. The agroforestry program contributed approximately $11,000 to the farmer grant program. AMS contributed approximately $56,000.

"Many farmers tell us that marketing is the primary barrier to their success," said Kathleen Merrigan, administrator of the Agricultural Marketing Service. "This new AMS-SARE partnership will enable small farmers to explore creative marketing ventures."

The Farmer Grant program offers producers a chance to try a new technique, conduct an experiment, or explore new marketing and production opportunities. Applicants are commercial producers from around the opportunities. Applicants are commercial producers from around the Northeast SARE region, which covers 12 states and Washington, D.C.

The grant cycle has application deadlines in December, with final decisions made in January. For more information about the Farmer Grant program at Northeast SARE, call (802) 656-0471.

2.) After 50 DIM- no heats, examine, prostaglandin injection if possible.

3.) Open after 150 DIM, Ovsync.

These programs most commonly revolve around biweekly or monthly herd health visit. A "Hot list" of open, not bred cows is kept and something is done to them every visit. Regular palpations can detect problems, allowing for earlier interventions. Programs can be devised without veterinary examinations, but some cows will be lost to undiagnosed problems.

Accurate records are essential to any plan. There are many computer programs that will automatically generate the "Hot lists", but breeding wheels and manual records can serve as well. The key is the ability to retrieve the information quickly in a usable form.

Obviously, the variations are numerous depending on facilities, success at heat detection and the dairyman's personal preferences. The use of Ovsync, without heat detection may be used for all or part of the year.

Reproductive Plans

Daniel P. Roher, DVM
Franklin Veterinary Associates
Greencastle, PA

Successfully breeding cows is an essential but difficult task on most dairies. Many heat detection aids and hormone injection programs have been developed to aid in breeding cows. While helpful, they must be used as part of a reproductive plan to ensure cows are inseminated at the proper time. It may seem obvious, but no cow will become pregnant if she is not bred. All too often, a cow is not bred for months, waiting for a patch to turn red or an observed heat after a prostaglandin injection.

A reproductive or breeding plan is necessary in order to breed cows in a timely and consistent manner. This will prevent cows from "being lost" or forgotten, wasting days open. The plan requires accurate record keeping, consistent decision making and utilization of the tools available to detect and control heat and ovulation. The heart of the plan is clear, written rules defining what will happen to a cow as she reaches various events.

For example:

1.) A cow will be bred at first heat after a voluntary waiting period of 50 days in milk (DIM).

2.) She is examined if no heats are observed by 60 DIM. If a corpus luteum (CL) is present, prostaglandin is administered, use patch or crayon and breed at heat.

3.) No heat observed, re-examine, if CL present, repeat prostaglandin.

4.) No heat observed, re-examine, good body condition, Ovsync program.

Alternatively, the rules can be written based on days in milk or after an event.

For example:

1.) After 7 DIM- first check for uterine infection, if abnormal, estradiol injection, prostaglandin after 10 DIM and

Genetically Engineered Food Could Be Lifeline for Developing World

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In the developed world, societies enjoy abundant diets more varied now than at any other time in history. That's in stark contrast to the developing world where millions of people confront profound food insecurity every day.

Part of the solution to righting this imbalance might involve something that is increasingly controversial in the developed world: genetically engineered food.

Cornell University's Susan McCouch, associate professor of plant breeding, asks if it is ethical for well-fed people in the United States, Canada, and Europe to ignore the potential of biotechnology to improve the nutritional status of hungry people around the world, particularly when the same technology is being used to extend life expectancy by producing pharmaceuticals. McCouch made her observations in her talk, "Is Biotechnology the Answer?" at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Washington, D.C.

If used appropriately, agricultural biotechnology can help alleviate world hunger and malnutrition, said McCouch, noting the development of genetically engineered rice to produce iron or provitamin A (beta carotene) as an example of a product that has the potential directly to improve the quality of life for millions.

"People who suffer from malnutrition generally lack essential levels of micronutrients because they lack the purchasing power to obtain sufficient diversity in their diet," said McCouch. The impact of delivering those essential micronutrients through food products such as enriched yellow rice is parallel [in the United States] to fortifying milk with vitamin D, salt with iodine or orange juice with calcium." Transgenic rice, she noted, offers immediate assistance as a staple food to people in need.

McCouch said she believes there is evidence of public support for the use of genetic engineering to improve diet and nutrition in the developing world. In her view, people support the technology when they see societal benefits, not just corporate benefits. Some opinion surveys show that people initially are uncomfortable with the idea of using biotechnology to transfer genes between organisms, she said, but those reservations can be overcome if people perceive a particular ethical or morally persuasive benefit.

McCouch said that careful consideration must be given to different kinds of agricultural systems around the world, and the risks weighed against the benefits to those different systems. "Clearly, not all people have the same choices nor will they have the same preferences," she said.

While the term biotechnology was originally coined during the industrial revolution, it has evolved into its contemporary meaning only in the last 25 years, which McCouch defined as modifying living things to suit human needs and preferences. "According to this definition, humans have practiced biotechnology for about 10,000 years, or as long as they have practiced agriculture," she said.

"Most of our domesticated food and fiber species have been altered through traditional crossing and selection to such an extent that they are no longer capable of surviving in the wild," said McCouch. Instead they prosper when nurtured and cultivated by human beings. The interaction of natural processes and human activity has given rise to novel agro-ecosystems and is responsible for generating and sustaining a vast array of genetic and ecological diversity on the planet.

Today, most people associate biotechnology with genetic manipulation at the DNA level, said McCouch. But not all biotechnology involves genetic engineering. "A large part of what biotechnology represents today is new knowledge about the natural processes of DNA replication, breakage, ligation and repair that has paved the way for a much deeper understanding of the mechanics of cell biology and the hereditary process itself."

This new knowledge, she said, has brought us to the edge of an ethical dilemma. While the ability to manipulate the hereditary process is not new, the depth of our understanding of this process has changed and the knowledge we have gained has opened up an endless array of possibilities for affecting future evolutionary trajectories.

"How the potential of the human imagination and creative spirit should be nurtured, guided, interpreted and ultimately directed and controlled with respect to biotechnology is a question of profound social, economical and ethical dimensions," said McCouch. "It deserves to be discussed, contemplated and digested at all levels of society."

Texas Longhorns Off Ohio's Muskrat Road

BARNESVILLE, Ohio — Gibraltar is a ton of bright red specimen Texas Longhorn living at Dickinson Cattle Company on Muskrat Road just north of here. He's not just any ordinary steer — he was the International Texas Longhorn Association High Point Legacy Show champion for 1999.

Muskrat Road, or T712, is a country serpentine road starting on Ohio #800 and winding west-erly to Fairview Road. It runs parallel to I-70 just a little over a mile to the south. This road cuts through the middle of Dickinson Cattle Company.

During the summer Longhorn cattle graze right up to both sides of the road. Tourist and locals often enjoy a low-key drive down Muskrat Road and gander at hundreds of brightly colored curly horned cattle.

In winter months the Longhorns are often nestled snugly down in the creek bottoms out of view. In order for winter public visibility, three champions have been selected by DCCI for exhibition conveniently placed on the south side of Muskrat and immediately after exiting off Ohio #800. They are a bull, Gizmo and two steers, Gibraltar and Senago. Gibraltar at age seven has a tip to tip horn length of more than 88 inches and Senago goes just beyond 77 inches at the tender age of five. The tip to tip measurement is the total amount of horn with a straight line tape to the end tips.

DCCI welcomes motorist to travel Muskrat and see two of the largest horned steers this side of California. One caution — electric fences are used so the boys don't decide to go play on I-70. While looking over the beef, kindly be certain your hip pocket doesn't touch the fence wires. Gibraltar is owned by DCCI in partnership with Bob Snyder, a bank examiner from Columbus, Ohio.

In the late 1800s, history and textbooks record that 15-20 year old Texas Longhorn steers grew up to six-foot horn spans. Modern beef-type Texas Longhorn steers will now reach more than six foot spreads at four to five years of age.

Numerous farms are starting to grown Longhorn steers because of their popular lean, healthy meat, their spectacular trophy horn spreads, and also just for the fun of it.

For more information on raising Longhorns, contact DCCI at (740) 758-5050.

"Gibraltar" is the 1999 International Champion High Point Region 3 Legacy Texas Longhorn Steer. He lives just north of Barnesville, Ohio. He is located for the winter in easy motorist view, compliments of Dickinson Cattle Company.

FUTURES MARKETS

government's main index for inflation. Overall, the U.S. economy is very robust. It is expected to grow at a strong rate of 4.5 percent the first quarter of 2000. That should continue the very solid demand for dairy products. The CPI index will be watched carefully in the future for any further signs of inflation.

Cheese and butter prices continued to weaken this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Barrel cheese prices fell slightly from $1.0775 per pound on Monday, April 10 to $1.07 by Friday, April 14. Block prices fell from $1.1075 per pound on Monday to $1.10 by Friday. The good news is that both blocks and barrels won't likely fall any further as they are officially right at support price levels. According to USDA, the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) continues to purchase surplus Midwestern process cheese. The CCC also recently purchased 680,000 pounds of barrel cheese at $1.1225 per pound for April to June delivery. This purchase was outside the price support program.

Butter prices also weakened further this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Grade AA butter prices fell from $1.0675 per pound on Monday to $1.04 by Friday. USDA reports very good sales activity related to the Easter/Passover holiday. Feature activity in grocery stores continues to move a lot of product. Cream supplies, however, are readily available resulting in "near capacity production schedules."

The milk production and cold storage reports due next week should provide interesting information regarding future price directions. The market will be looking for March cow numbers in 20 major dairy states to at least level off. If that happens, it should signal that the milk supply is beginning to respond to low milk prices. Combined with strong demand for milk and dairy products, a slow-down in the milk supply will help raise milk prices the second half of the year.

Farmer Productivity Not Due To Age

ITHACA, N.Y. --In the agricultural world, the common belief is that a farmer's efficiency increases to its maximum in the middle years and then decreases with age.

Not so, say Cornell University researchers. They have found that a farmer's productivity has less to do with efficiency decreases due to age and everything to do with using the latest agricultural technology.

"There indeed seems to be a life cycle effect, but it appears for different reasons than we thought. Productivity increases, reaches a plateau and then decreases. Younger farmers tend to start out with older technology, and that's why they're not as productive. And the older farmers as a group do not keep buying new technology in their waning years because it's not cost effective, and that's why they're not as productive," says Loren Tauer, Cornell professor of agricultural economics and a researcher with Cornell's Agricultural and Financial Management Program.

Beginning farmers are building equity, he says, and they often start with equipment that is old. On the other hand, older farmers are making a business decision to forgo purchasing a new $200,000 combine, rationalizing that the next farmer on their land can buy it.

The research paper, "Farmer Efficiency and Technology Use with Age," by Tauer and Nazibrola Lordkipanidze, a Cornell graduate student in agricultural economics, will be published in the April 2000 issue of the journal Agricultural and Resource Economics Review.

Tauer explains that even if older farmers see a decrease in productivity, this study shows that older, experienced farmers are still using older technology efficiently. "Seeing a decrease in production isn't always devastating," he says.

Tauer says the U.S. Department of Agriculture the federal agency that funded the research, is seeking to find ways to sustain the productivity of America's farmers, whose average age increased from 52 in 1987 to 54 in 1997.

Increased Sales And Integrated Campaign Top 1999 Dairy Promotion Success

1) Continued growth of total milk sales All-milk sales grew 2 to 3 percent in 1999 in the face of relatively high prices for on-farm milk and retail dairy products for much of the year, along with record milk production of 160 billion pounds

2) A fully integrated fluid milk plan between dairy producers and processors. This included the joint TV "go milk?@?" advertising campaign launched this fall for children's teen, and adult audiences, which already has won several creative awards. next year's $180 million joint fluid milk program will include retail promotion, public relations, publicity, advertising, nutrition marketing, and nutrition research.

3) The ongoing Fluid Milk Strategic Thinking Initiative, which has identified further opportunities to increase fluid milk sales through vending machines. Prototype milk vending machines were demonstrated at an industry trade show in the fall of 1999, and pilot programs began exploring the potential of these machines in schools.

4) Continued growth in cheese sales, helped by the largest generic cheese promotion program in history. The $59 million integrated marketing program included national and local farmer funding, along with increased participation by key processor and retail partners weight, to the farm price of milk

8) U.S. cheese export increases in key markets, despite ongoing world economic problems. Among key markets expected to show an increase in cheese of increased cheese sales by Wendy's during the promotion period

5) Growing scientific endorsements of milk's role in a healthy diet Two of the most significant advances in this area included.

--A pledge signed by more than 30 healthy-related organizations at the National Calcium Summit in July to urge the public to consume more calcium-rich foods, including dairy products, to combat the current calcium deficiency in the U.S.

--A policy statement by the American Academy of Pediatrics, the nation's largest pediatrics professional group, urging pediatricians to recommend calcium-rich foods, such as milk, cheese and yogurt, to help combat the

On the retail level, an aggressive "Behold the power of Cheese™" co-marketing program helped overall cheese sales increase 3.5 percent during the first ten months of 1999. In addition, cheese publicity efforts over the first half of the year resulted in an audience reach of more 400 million.

In the foodservice sector, a partnership last May with Wendy's featuring a Cheese Lovers' Bacon Cheeseburger, resulted in 2.25 million pounds current calcium crisis amount children and teens

6) Dairy-friendly health and research news publicized by dairy councils, prompting more than 2 billion "impressions" in consumer and business media.

Example: Recent news of a checkoff-funded nutrition study, which concluded that a diet high in dairy can significantly lower the risk of obesity, reached more than 6 million television viewers

7) The continued success of "Do it with dairy®", an aggressive dairy products marketing program that helps the industry sell more dairy ingredients At the 1999 Institute of Food Technologists trade show in June, DMI's booth generated nearly 800 inquiries, established industry contacts with leading food processors, and demonstrated dry dairy ingredients, technology, and innovations. Last year, the gross value of dry dairy ingredients alone contributed nearly $2 billion, or $1.20 per hundred-export value and volume in 1999 are Japan, Taiwan, South Korea, China, and Southeast Asia. A test market program with a Japanese company resulted in a 175 percent increase in U.S. cream cheese sales, allowing a full marketing effort in 2000

9) A producer-led initiative to increase the grassroots governance and market impact of the dairy checkoff. These changes will allow the dairy marketing program to be implemented more consistently across the country, resulting in more efficient and effective use of dairy checkoff dollars. They will also allow stronger working relationships between dairy promotion and industry partners, including dairy cooperatives and processors.

10) DMI and National Milk Producers Federation launched an industry-wide initiative to strengthen and protect the image of dairy in consumers' minds. The two organizations jointly produced and distributed an informational "tool kit" to help industry communicators form consistent messages in addressing consumer issues relating to food safety, animal welfare, and retail dairy pricing.

Dairy Guide Available

WESMINSTER, Md. — A new publication from the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service (NRAES) presents and documents guidelines for managing existing housing systems and planning new systems to improve profitability, reduce labor requirements, and improve cow comfort. This collection of 36 papers ($30.00 plus S & H/sales tax, 456 pages, February 2000) is the proceedings from the conference "Dairy Housing and Equipment Systems: Managing and Planning for Profitability," held February 1-3, in Camp Hill, Pennsylvania.

Dairy Housing and Equipment Systems: Managing and Planning for Profitability, NRAES — 129, includes 36 papers divided into eight categories. The first section on cow comfort, decisions, and management presents papers on facilities; capital investments; cow comfort, fear, and productivity; and producer satisfaction with expansion decisions. The next group of five papers reviews planning new facilities: site evaluation and selection, farmstead layout, freestall barn layouts, responsibilities in constructing new facilities, and growing a staff. Five presentations on system management discuss evaluating and improving existing dairy systems, biosecurity, lighting, photoperiod management, and putting money where it matters. The next four papers on environmental control for cow comfort explain natural ventilation systems, systems controls, heat stress relief and supplemental cooling, and tunnel ventilation.

The topics for freestall troubleshooting, design, and management encompass the next five papers, including a paper on sand for bedding. The section on facilities management and health includes three papers on bedding's contribution to mastitis, environmental risk factors contributing to lameness, and flooring. The next three presentations discuss the design of the feed area and water space, feed-bunk management, and the impact of head gates and overcrowding on production. The final section of this publication includes papers on defining and managing special cows, facility design and case studies for the transition cow, plastic and fabric covered arch-frame buildings, restraint and treatment facilities and equipment, and sort gates.

The proceedings will be a valuable resource for a diverse group of agricultural and industry professionals, including dairy farm owners and managers, producer advisors and consultants, builders and facility designers, extension and university educators and researchers, veterinarians, lenders, state and federal regulatory staff, equipment suppliers, agricultural engineers, dairy scientists, and agricultural economists.

Oil Price Hike May Squeeze Ohio Farmers

COLUMBUS, Ohio—Recent huge increases in oil prices are going to financially pinch some Ohio farmers still struggling from two years of low crop prices and last summer's drought.

World oil prices rose in response to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' (OPEC) actions to limit their member states' production. On Ohio farms, the impact will depend on whether farmers bought fuels and other crop production inputs before the big price increase, said Ohio State University agricultural economist Allan Lines. Farmers often reap preseason dealer discounts by buying supplies during the last months of the calendar year.

Farmers who haven't purchased supplies may see increases as high as $10-15 per acre for non-land operating costs, which are the variable costs of putting out a crop, Lines said. Fuel costs alone may increase by $10-12 per acre, he said.

"These numbers become significant as you apply them across all of the acres you farm," Lines said. "For a 2,000-acre operation, that's an increase of $20,000 up to as much as maybe $30,000."

Oil prices have a ripple effect through a farm operation, Lines said. "It's not just fuel costs alone that will increase, because energy costs are embedded in just about everything else in one way or another," Lines said.

The most direct impact would be on diesel fuel to power farm equipment and trucks, and propane used in grain dryer operations in the fall, Lines said. A 50-percent increase in energy prices would raise these costs by the same percentage, he said.

Another important input is nitrogen fertilizer, a natural gas-based product. Lines figures a 50-percent increase in the price of natural gas would raise nitrogen prices by about 20 percent. However, because of the current excess in nitrogen fertilizers in the world, it will be difficult to pass this price increase on to producers.

Other cost increases, based on a 50-percent energy price hike, are: machinery and labor costs, 20 percent; lime and farm chemicals, 8 percent each; phosphorous and potash fertilizers, 7 percent; seed, 1 percent.

The lingering question is the effect of continued high prices on the longer-term costs of production, Lines said. If the current 50-percent increase remains intact, farmers will have to bear significant cost increases in the 2001 growing season, he said.

"If you have a 50-percent increase in the price of energy maintained over time, and manufacturers are able to pass 100 percent of this cost increase on to producers, overall that would raise the sum and substance of variable costs by an average 18 percent over a year," Lines says.

And the prospects for a long-term price increase are not quite clear at this time, Lines said. "Is OPEC going to be able to maintain a tight market? Right now they aren't suggesting a major increase in production."

"All we can say is look back in history. These kind of spikes have not been sustained, but we can't really say for how long this spike will last, or maybe it's a new plateau."

Farmers don't have many options for managing the effect of the oil price increases, Lines said. Cutting back on inputs could be short-sighted by saving costs at the expense of reducing the farm's crop yield potential and gross income from crop sales.

Topping the management agenda should be a renegotiation of land rents to reflect the higher costs of production, Lines said. Hopefully, landowners will be sympathetic, and if not, farmers will have to bite the bullet, financially.

Another strategy would be to plant more soybeans, which depend on fewer petroleum-based inputs than corn, Lines said. About one-third of all non-land inputs for corn are energy related, compared to one-fifth for soybeans. The downside is that grain markets are swamped with soybeans, and higher supplies further depress prices.

Adadc Turns A Negative Campaign Into A Positive Milk Message

SYRACUSE, NY — Through working with the New York State Health Department and local Healthy Heart programs, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) put a positive slant on the Center For Science in the Public Interest's (CSPI) normally negative campaign.

The CSPI Campaign—offered free to health organizations around the country—uses negative TV, radio, and print information about the amount of fat in whole milk to persuade consumers to switch to 1% or fat-free milk. To avoid using negative references to any category of milk, ADADC worked with Department of Health and local Healthy Heart program in Rochester and Albany to design public service announcements and consumer events that focused on the positives of lowfat and fat-free milk consumption.

The local CBS, NBC, and FOX affiliates were on hand at a press conference in Rochester, where blind-folded community members tried their hand at identifying whole, 2%, 1%, and fat-free milk. ADADC also distributed samples of fat-free hot chocolate milk to show consumers nonfat doesn't mean non-tasty. Taste tests were held throughout the region over a six week period between January and February 2000. Results are still being calculated.

What did residents think of the campaign? "There's a perception among consumers that if something is low or nonfat, it can't possibly taste good," says Beth Meyer, Public Relations Specialist for ADADC. "It was a real surprise for many people to realize they couldn't taste a difference between the milk they generally drink and a lower-fat one. And, since taste is still the primary decision maker, we helped many consumers enjoy drinking milk again."

In addition to the Rochester and Albany programs, ADADC also helped provide materials for programs in Cortland County and Delaware County. In addition, ADADC arranged for a local Registered Dietician to be featured in an interview on WBRE (NBC) Wilkes-Barre, in conjunction with a program in that city.

Farm Management

JOHN BERRY
Ag Marketing Agent
Lehigh Co. Extension

Pennsylvania farmers are coping with economic hard times by watching how they spend money for everyday needs and cutting back on some activities.

A large majority of farmers have taken at least one step to reduce living expenses. Seventy-one percent say they are reducing expenses by shopping at discount stores, and 61 percent are cutting medical costs by switching to generic drugs. 52 percent say they are saving money by buying more used or second hand merchandise such as clothing, furniture and machinery. And 51 percent said they save money by avoiding name brand products when they have a choice.

Some financial adjustments that farm families have made are prudent decisions, but they can have important negative impacts on local businesses and may have negative long-term consequences for family life-styles. "Shifting purchases to discount stores or delaying purchases may result in financial stress among family-owned independent main street businesses," reports John Berry, Agricultural Marketing Agent with Penn State Cooperative Extension.

More than one third have changed food shopping or eating habits to save money, and 32 percent said they have reduced household utility use. Thirty-four percent say their standard of living is declining due to their financial situation, and 33 percent say they have delayed retirement plans. Other ways of saving money include changing transportation patterns, (30 percent), and postponing medical care, (21 percent).

In addition to changing their everyday spending habits, farm families are looking at other ways to save money. Fifty-one percent said they are cutting back on what they spend on social activities and entertainment, and 47 percent said they have postponed major household purchases. Forty-five percent have cut back on charitable contributions, and 45 percent have postponed purchases of major items needed in the farm business.

Farm families are purchasing more items on credit than they used to, and 22 percent say it has been necessary to borrow money from lenders for living expenses. Another 10 percent have borrowed from family members. A few, 16 percent, have raised money by selling possessions or cashing in insurance, and 7 percent have sold land or other assets to reduce debt.

"Taken as a whole, these data show the widespread and pervasive changes that farm families are doing to make ends meet," Berry said. He added that the findings document the seriousness of lifestyle changes farm families are making and the tough choices they may face if farm prices do not improve.

For example, rural churches and other groups that rely upon charitable contributions will undoubtedly be adversely affected as farm families reduce their giving. This only serves to reduce the capacity of these organizations to help others during these difficult times.

In addition to reducing expenses, a significant number of farm operators have sought to increase income. Thirty-seven percent said at least one family member has taken an off-farm job in the past 12 months, and 28 percent said they are working more overtime at off-farm jobs. Twelve percent have started home-based businesses, and 21 percent are trying to cope with income needs by expanding their farm operations.

Conservation Farmer Makes Class 2, 3 Soils Productive

According to the district, Trycieki, 10-year president of the Bucks County Farm Bureau and a member of the board of trustees at Delaware Valley College, began farming when he was a child. In 1985, Tom began farming full-time and still cares for some acreage in Buckingham Township owned by his uncle, Walter Trycieki.

During the past 10 years, Trycieki has completed conservation work on the 100-acre Trycieki family farm besides the rented acreage.

According to the district, the conservation farmer has installed more than 16,000 feet of terraces, diversions, and waterways to control soil erosion and water runoff. Trycieki has placed 8,340 feet of diversion, 4,500 feet of waterways, 4,150 feet of terrace, and seven water control structures.

He has placed creek crossings over several laneways throughout his uncle's farm.

Trycieki has a target date of May 1 for corn planting, depending on weather and soil temperature. May 20 is the target date for soybeans.

Even on some Class 2 and 3 soils, Trycieki, in good years, has been able to harvest an average of 135 bushels per acre of corn. Some fields have averaged as close to 100-185 bushels of corn per acre on the better ground.

"You can get a good crop even with Class 2s and 3s," said Trycieki. "But proper management is a must."

The acreage is split 50-50 with corn and soybeans. The grain is sold to elevators in Delaware, Maryland, and locally.

Trycieki completes routine testing of soils to determine nutrient applications. He also uses starter fertilizer on the crops.

Using one-pass minimum tillage and no-till provides many labor- and time-saving benefits, noted Trycieki. That's one of the biggest challenges facing farmers in the 21st Century — cutting down on labor and maintenance costs while input costs keep rising.

Trycieki has help from his son, Thomas B., 14. Thomas is in the 8th grade at Holicong Middle School and a member of the National Junior Honor Society. Thomas helps manage the farm with his computer expertise.

The first conservation practice installed was a system of swails and diversions. About two years ago Trycieki placed some water crossings in with the help of the Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) and the conservation district.

Some work includes about 15 acres of fields in corn-soybean rotation near a major housing development in Plumstead Township. There, diversions help control water flow to keep the soils intact. Also, Trycieki does his part to ensure soybean stubble and corn crop residue remain on the surface.

Using minimum and no-till is the number one conservation strategy, noted Trycieki. He has been using the combination on all acres for the past five years.

As for the Class 3 soils, he said that farmers "can't push them," said Trycieki, and to stay out of the fields until they are dry and warm enough to plant seed. Going in with the fields too wet creates hardpan soil and compaction problems.

He uses minimal till to help ready the ground, to mix organic material from corn residue in with the soil to promote tilth.

Trycieki uses Roundup Ready soybeans and some Bt corn. Agriculture and agribusiness in general can benefit from the crops, which save on herbicides.

The biggest challenges facing cash crop farmers, said the Bucks County Farm Bureau president, is how to survive in the 21st Century during an unstable commodity price market, genetically modified crop scares, and tighter regulations.

Low commodity prices and higher input costs are creating a "dilemma for all of us," said Trycieki. "We need to find ways to make production agriculture more viable and profitable."

This year Trycieki increased his catastrophic crop insurance to 65 percent. Those who don't elect crop insurance are "playing Russian roulette with their cash flow," he said.

"I can't stress enough why farmers need to be looking into crop insurance," he said.

At the same time, Trycieki is very "conservation-minded," he said. "What we need to do as farmers is improve our conservation practices. It is our obligation and responsibility to be stewards on this land for the survival of all mankind."

Trycieki has placed creek crossings over several laneways throughout his uncle's farm.

Trycieki's biggest problem is finding the money to do it. Cost-share programs through the Farm Service Agency help. If Trycieki had more money, he said, he would utilize it to place conservation practices on all additional acres, including owned and rented ground.

Trycieki urges all farmers and agribusiness people to join Farm Bureau to work on ways to make farming more viable and to protect our agricultural resources.

USDA Proposes Procedures For Pork Referendum

WASHINGTON, April 14, 2000--Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman today announced proposed procedures for the upcoming referendum on continuation of the pork checkoff program.

"This is a very important issue, and I encourage folks to comment on these proposed regulations. I want to make sure that the rules for the referendum are absolutely clear and understood by pork producers around the country so we can have a fair referendum on the checkoff," said Glickman.

The proposed rules, which will be published in the Federal Register on April 18, will establish a two-day period for in-person voting and a four-week absentee ballot period for producers. Voting will take place at the Farm Service Agency county offices, and FSA employees will count the ballots, determine the eligibility of challenged voters, and report the results.

Importers will cast their ballots by mail.

The Secretary will consider all comments received up to 30 days after publication of the proposed rules before issuing final rules setting the date for the referendum. The referendum will be paid for with USDA funds.

The congressionally mandated pork checkoff program is authorized by the Pork Promotion, Research, and Consumer Information Act of 1985. Secretary Glickman announced in late February that he was authorizing a vote on continuation of the checkoff program.

Comments, postmarked no later than May 18, may be sent to Ralph L. Tapp, Chief, Marketing Programs Branch, Livestock and Seed Program, AMS, USDA, 1400 Independence Avenue, SW, STOP-0251, Washington, D.C. 20250-0251, telephone 202/720-1115; facsimile 202/720/1125, or email at Ralph.Tapp@usda.gov

Third Generation Fruit Growers Want To Continue Family Tradition

Steve and Judy Slaybaugh are the third generation to farm in Biglerville. They signed up their orchard farm for the state's Farm Preservation program to help future generations stay in farming.

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

BIGLERVILLE (Adams Co.) — Steve Slaybaugh's grandfather Glen purchased a farm in 1936. Since then, each generation has added onto the farm to help their fruit business grow.

Now Steve and Judy want to assure future generations of that opportunity.

The Slaybaugh's 228-acre farm is one of more than 100 farms in Pennsylvania accepted into the Farm Preservation program during the last 100 days leading up to Earth Day, which is this Saturday, April 22.

"We wanted to make sure that we did anything we could do to keep future generations going in farming," said Steve, who sees development creeping up around their farm. A golf course borders one of the farms the Slaybaughs lease, while a large housing development is just down the road.

Steve and Judy farm with their son David, the fourth generation of Slaybaughs to farm, who lives in the farm house with his wife and three children. David's youngest son is 5-year-old Blake.

"Our grandson loves being on the tractors and out in the orchards," said Judy. "We want to give him the chance to farm if he wants it."

The Slaybaughs grow apples, peaches, pears, and cherries. They also raise Christmas trees. In addition to the farm that they own, they also lease three other farms.

Each year the Slaybaughs produce on average 180,000 to 200,000 bushel of apples, along with 150 to 180 tons of cherries, 10,000 bushel of peaches, and 4,000 bushel of pears. About 50 percent of their produce is sold as fresh produce, while the other 50 percent goes to Knouse Foods in Peach Glen for processing.

"Farming keeps getting harder and harder each year," said Steve. "With chemical, equipment, and other input prices increasing, our product price still stays the same. We have to grow more bushels per acre and increase production to keep up with increased costs."

Although farming is challenging, the Slaybaughs would choose no other life for themselves. "It's a good life," said Judy, who has known her husband of 33 years ever since they were in fifth grade. "You really can't beat life on the farm."

In addition to growing produce and Christmas trees, the Slaybaughs also start their own apple trees in a nursery. "It's been an interest for me," said Steve. "It's a change from fruit growing because you're working with nurseries. You have to plan ahead because it takes two years for the seedlings to be ready to plant in the orchard."

Fruit farming is a long-term business. Unlike "straight farming" as the Slaybaughs call traditional farming, which generates a harvest each day, a newly planted orchard doesn't produce profits for several years.

"For apples, it takes 11 years until you get your first profit dollar," said Steve. "But the apple orchard site should last 25 to 30 years."

To keep up production and remain consistent, the Slaybaughs regenerate orchard sites each year. "Every time you push one site out, you have to put in a new site," said Judy.

"We're now trying to plant smaller root stocks that are tighter and lower to the ground," said Steve. "Increasing the density of the orchard increases production."

Steve, Judy, and David all work together to make decisions on the farm. While Steve and David handle most of the spraying, planting, and outside work, Judy maintains the book records and relays messages.

During peak apple harvest season, the Slaybaughs employ anywhere from 40 to 50 seasonal workers. "That really makes payroll get more hectic," said Judy.

According to Steve and Judy, it takes a lot of people to make a successful farming operation. "We depend on our spray consultants to help keep disease and fungus away," said Steve. "We also need to work with soil analysts to determine what varieties will grow the best in our soils."

The packers and processors also play an integral role in a profitable orchard. "Everybody has their step," said Judy. "Anything we can do better will produce a greater return for our farm."

Steve worked with his father Richard on the farm until Richard was badly hurt during Steve's first year at University of Maryland. Steve quit college and returned to run the farm. Now he is preparing his son to eventually take over the business.

"Except when he is going hunting, Steve always wants to be on the farm," said Judy. "In 20 years, we hope to give Blake that same opportunity."

Son David and parents Steve and Judy make all the farm decisions together. While farming continually becomes more challenge, the Slaybaughs still believe nothing beats the life of a farmer.

202 Head Exhibit In Maryland Spring Show

TIMONIUM, Md. — 202 Holsteins exhibited in the Maryland Holstein Spring Show held at the Timonium Fairgrounds earlier this month. Of the 202 entries, 130 animals were exhibited by junior members.

Maple Lawn's five-year-old, Medway Astre Mixie, and Chip

Savage's famous four-year-old, Savage Leigh Bellwood Linda, were named the two best cows of the show. Judge Michael Heath of Westmister raved about the two cows' "dairyness with size."

Topping the heifer classes were Oseena MS Starlite-ET, owned by Jami Savage, and Shruppdale Trisha, owned by Amy Iager. The two heifers were champions of both the open and junior division.

Winning junior division grand champion honors were Ryan and Jami Savage. Ryan's senior-two-year-old, Lylehaven Lindy Delila, was the best of the junior show, while Jami's junior-three-year-old, Savage Leigh Banana split, was named reserve champion MD-Dun-Loafin owned the total performance winner of the show, a five-year-old Jed daughter, Harvale Barton Crystal, who had 37,070 pounds of milk. Savage Leigh received premier breeder and exhibitor awards and dedicated them to the memory of Wayne Savage's father who passed away just days before the show.

Farmer Cooperative Showcase Ag Environmental Successes

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Ag-Earth Partnership, a private-public sector coalition led by the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives (NCFC), recently launched a series of events building up to April 22, Earth Day 2000, on the National Mall.

Highlighting the theme "Agriculture and the Environment: A Growing Partnership," national leaders and exhibits showcase innovative agricultural efforts and partnership dedicated to conserving and protecting natural resources.

"I am delighted to be a part of this significant effort," said Cooperative leader Glenn Webb, Illinois farmer and Growmark, Inc. board chairman. "It is important that the public gain a better appreciation that we in cooperatives and agriculture are working hard, not only to provide them with food, fiber and shelter, but also cleaner water and air, wildlife habitat, and open space."

The farmer cooperative leader joined Glickman in presenting the Ag-Earth Partnership's Millennium Farmer Award to Richard, Cori, and Todd Wittman of Wittman Farms in Lapwai, Idaho. The Wittmans, active cooperative leaders and members of Cenex Harvest States Cooperatives, Inc. and AgAmerica/Western Farm Credit Banks, were recognized for their outstanding conservative leadership and efforts to help educate urban America about agricultural stewardship.

College of Agricultural Sciences

From the Department of Dairy and Animal Science

This regular column from Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science features the research findings, student opportunities, and reports on other important topics generated in the Department. The back issues of the column are archived on Lancaster Farming's Internet www.lancasterfarming.com home page. Look for them.

Harold Harpster and Gabriella Varga
Department of Dairy and Animal Science
Penn State

With the spring semester well underway we are both in a "teaching mode" so let's begin this column with a quiz. What animal industry:

- 1) Will generate over $11 billion in feed sales in the US and over $26 billion worldwide?
- 2) Has an annual rate of sales growth of 4 to 7%?
- 3) Utilizes U.S. crops at the rate of over 3.5 million tons of corn and a million tons of soybeans annually?
- 4) Utilizes over 1.5 million tons of poultry, swine and beef byproducts annually and in so doing directly supports dairy, livestock, and poultry producers?
- 5) Feeds over 125 million head of "livestock" per day with the equivalent of 850 railroad boxcar loads of feed, each containing 40 tons?

6) Directly supports the viability of many rural farm businesses?

Yes, the answer in each case is the pet food industry and these figures do not include the untold millions spent on veterinary care, grooming, toys, equipment, sporting and competitive events, and many others.

Obviously an industry of this magnitude requires a variety of trained professionals. Until recently few traditional animal science departments have provided undergraduate course work in the companion animal area. The demand for such information is growing as more students entering animal science majors come from non-farm backgrounds and many lack any real experience with farm animals. At Penn State we see increasing numbers of new students indicate that companion animals are their number one species interest.

To address this need, we recently began to offer "Animal Science 305 - Companion Animal Care and Nutrition," a 3 credit course that students may use as one of their "animal management" selections. We have five learning objectives that we expect students to accomplish.

1. Develop an appreciation for the role and importance of companion animals in our society.

2. Develop an understanding of the basic nutritional and environmental needs of companion animals.

3. Develop skills in the formulation of diets for companion animals.

4. Develop the basic management skills required for the proper care of companion animals.

5. Develop an appreciation for the economic importance of companion animals and the career opportunities they offer

In line with the interests of many students, we emphasize dogs and cats in our lectures. However, other species are addressed including birds, reptiles, and several small mammal species. We address the nutritional and reproductive biology of each species. The more applied areas of feeding, housing and management are also discussed.

We have been very fortunate in obtaining the help and support of several off-campus folks who have been valuable in providing "real world" experiences for our students. The Lang family, owners of Dad's Products Company, INC. in Meadville, PA., have been most generous in hosting our class each year. They have provided transportation and lodging for a two-day class trip to their pet food facility. All aspects of pet food manufacture are discussed and we tour the entire plant. Most of our students are astonished to see the size and scale of the facilities for modern pet food manufacture.

Metzger Animal Hospital in nearby State College has also shared their time and talents. Dr. Fred Metzger and Dr. Bob Rider lecture in class on modern animal health care followed by an informative tour of their hospital facility.

Finally, the Tom Battalina family, owners of Tornado

Hollow Kennel in Cochranton, PA. give the students an overview of managing a family-owned kennel. Field-trial retrieving demonstrations using several of their outstanding Labrador Retrievers leave us in awe of the abilities of these outstanding canines!

We certainly haven't abandoned our interests in traditional animal agriculture, but it's been fun to branch out into the companion animal species. For those young people considering enrollment in Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, this course represents an opportunity to gain knowledge and experience in this growing segment of animal agriculture!

Wayne County To Hold Dairy Forum

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — Dairying is the number one industry in Wayne County. It contributes greatly to our local economy as well as preserving our farmland and beauty of the State of Pennsylvania.

Unfortunately, with the milk price, many of our farmers are incurring financial hardships and may soon go out of business hurting both our local economy and leaving our local farmland empty and unproductive. Wayne County is at a crossroads and must act immediately if we are to preserve our dairy farms.

To deal with this issue, the Wayne County Chamber of Commerce Agricultural Committee is sponsoring a Dairy Focus Forum. The purpose of the meeting is to see how Wayne County can help promote and retain dairy industry as a feasible economic business. Representatives from state and local government, county commissioners, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, USDA, among others have been invited to attend this meeting. Local dairy producers and other interested people are encouraged to attend.

Pa. USDA Helps Save Chesapeake Bay

HARRISBURG, (Dauphin Co.) — Earth Day 2000 finds USDA agencies in Pennsylvania doing their part to preserve and improve water quality in the Chesapeake Bay through more than $192 million in projects, programs, and practices specifically within the Chesapeake Bay Watershed in Pennsylvania during the last seven years.

While representing just a portion of each agency's work throughout the state, their efforts help to install or improve water and wastewater disposal systems in rural Pennsylvania and help farmers install conservation practices which prevent erosion run-off and nutrients from polluting streams going into the bay.

Agencies of the USDA work with farmers, landowners, and communities to protect and conserve the resources as well as improve the quality of life for rural Pennsylvanians.

Earth Day is an excellent opportunity to highlight the work we have been doing to improve rural communities, water quality, aquatic habitat, and recreational opportunities in the Chesapeake Bay, according to Cook, rural development state director; Bill Baumgartner; Farm Service Agency, state executive director; and Janet Oertly, Natural Resources Conservation Service, state conservationist.

Rural Development (RD), through its Rural Utilities Service, administers a water and wastewater loan and grant program in rural areas, cities, and towns with populations less than 10,000. Public entities and non-profit associations may apply for funding to acquire, construct, expand and improve rural water supplies and waste disposal systems. RD has funded eight water projects and 42 sewer projects for more than $122 million in grants and loans in the Chesapeake Bay Watershed since 1993. They have additional applications for 12 sewer projects and one water project for more than $33 million.

The Rural Utilities Service is coordinating the Water 2000 Initiative, seeking to provide clean, safe, and affordable drinking water to all rural homes by the end of 2000.

The community of South Philipsburg in Centre County lies within the Chesapeake Bay Watershed. Their existing wild-cat sewer system permitted raw sewage to drain into ditches along the streets contributing to river and stream pollution and potential health hazards for the residents.

Borough officials applied to USDA Rural Development for assistance to correct the problem. The residents were very concerned about the situation, but were apprehensive about the cost of constructing a new sewage collection system. At a public meeting attended by representatives of Rural Development and DEP, officials explained the negative impact the existing sewer system had on the environment and the health of the residents. One young mother spoke up for her children and all children who might come in contact with the raw sewage, saying it was time for a change. Borough officials agreed to proceed with the new sewer system and their application to Rural Development was approved. The new wastewater system now provides safe and sanitary conditions for this small community of more than 400 people.

"Quality drinking water is critical to all Pennsylvanians," said Cheryl Cook, RD state director. "Our efforts help communities provide clean drinking water to their residents and insure the future of the community. Clean water for communities means Pennsylvania sends clean water to the bay."

USDA Releases Pesticide Summary

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service today released its "Pesticide Data Program: Annual Summary, Calendar Year 1998." The program provides statistically reliable data on pesticide residues detected in selected foods.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) uses Pesticide Data Program (PDP) information to assess dietary exposure to pesticide residues. EPA analyzes exposure to infants and children as well as other sensitive populations as required by the Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA). PDP data are also used to reevaluate tolerances to support the new FQPA pesticide reregistration requirements. USDA uses PDP data to support the export of American products in an expanding competitive global market and to review good agricultural practices with respect to pest management issues.

In 1998, PDP analyzed a total of 8,500 samples. These samples were collected as close to the point of consumption as possible. Foods analyzed in 1998 included six fresh fruits and vegetables, seven processed fruits and vegetables, milk, soybeans, and corn syrup—food items that are highly consumed by children. These foods were monitored for insecticide, herbicide, fungicide and growth regulator residues. PDP also conducted a special survey on single servings of pears. Data from this survey were used by EPA to evaluate acute dietary exposure to pesticides.

PDP has analyzed 40 different commodities through 1999, and is testing peanut butter, poultry, and sweet cherries this year. PDP has begun to reintroduce commodities tested earlier by the program to assess the effectiveness of label changes and other mitigation measures resulting from implementation of FQPA. PDP conducted a special survey on single-servings of apples in 1999 with a special survey on peaches currently underway. Data from these single-servings surveys are being provided to EPA on a continuing basis. Program activities planned for 2001 include a survey to evaluate potential exposure to pesticides through consumption of drinking water. Funding for this survey is in the President's Budget for fiscal year 2001. Data collected in 1999 will be released in the next summary.

Congress approved implementation of PDP in January 1991 because of the recognized need to improve the quality and quantity of information available on chemical residues in domestically produced and imported PDP provides the most comprehensive database available on actual residue levels of pesticides found in the U.S. food supply.

Copies of the 1998 PDP Annual Summary can be obtained by writing to the Pesticide Data Branch, Science and Technology, Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA, 8700 Centreville Road, Suite 200, Manassas, VA 20110, by faxing to (703) 369-0678, or calling (703) 330-2300.

Penn State Initiative Supports State's Food Processing Industry

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) - A university-wide task force of Penn State faculty and technology-transfer experts is helping to implement the Food Industry Initiative in Pennsylvania, a focused effort to support Pennsylvania's food manufacturing and processing industry.

Coordinated by Penn State's college of Agricultural Sciences, the initiative brings leaders from industry, academia and government together to strengthen connections and address common issues - including workforce training, legislation and regulation, and science and technology - affecting the industry's profitability and viability.

Penn State will create a centralized access point for research, training and development opportunities for Pennsylvania food manufacturing firms, according to Paul Wangsness, senior associate dean in the College of Agricultural Sciences and chair of the initiative's steering committee.

The Food Industry Initiative was formed in response to Pennsylvania Governor Tom Ridge's "Technology 21 Initiative," which identified six business sectors that could develop family-sustaining, high-technology jobs in the commonwealth. Agribusiness, including food processing and manufacturing, was one of the six sectors selected.

"As many as 3,000 companies are involved in food processing in our state - many of them small or mid-sized," Wangsness said. "These companies can use help with a variety of needs - from research and development to technical consultation. The college is leading a university planning group to develop a centralized access system to Penn State services, as well as to resources beyond Penn State."

"We're not expecting to add new resources initially," he said. "The centralized access system simply will be a mechanism to link food manufacturing companies to existing services. Smaller companies sometimes are unsure about how to approach the university. We are trying to build comfort and communication levels for the food manufacturing sector."

The steering committee is developing a mission statement, operational structure and name for the access point. The committee plans to make its final recommendations to the dean of the college by June 30.

According to Wangsness, a 1999 task force identified 97 areas in the Penn State system with potential to support the needs of the food processing and manufacturing industry, including education, research, technical training/certification, workforce training and product commercialization.

"We were surprised by the richness and range of the services already in place," he said. "There's a real excitement about enhancing the connection between the available services and the companies that can use them the most. Over the next few years, we'll continue developing the access point and defining its services within the university."

In addition to Wangsness, the steering committee includes:

•Robert Beelman, professor of food science, College of Agricultural Sciences.

•David Blandford, department head, agricultural economics and rural sociology, College of Agricultural Sciences.

•Jack Gido, director, PEN-NTAP.

Ohio Offers Attractions For Holstein Enthusiasts

COLUMBUS, Oh.—The excitement is beginning to build with the approach of the 2000 National Holstein Convention to be held in Columbus, Ohio on June 29 through July 1, 2000.

The Ohio Holstein Association of over 1,200 members welcome fellow breeders and dairy cattle enthusiasts from across the United States and the world to visit some of the premier Holstein herds in the country. Whether your interest is index, type, large commercial, or show cattle, Ohio has selected a diverse group of herds for your inspection.

The other Host Day opportunity, attendees can visit several unique tourist attractions that are close in proximity to the convention center and give a special blend of nature, history, and chocolate treats.

The Logan County sightseeing tour will provide some very interesting attractions along with a stop at Select Sires for lunch. Ohio Caverns will be the first stop. The Caverns feature Ohio's largest and most colorful caverns that are still in the process of forming.

The next stop will be Mac-O-Chee castle, home of editor, writer, social critic, and diplomat Donn Piatt. The castle started as a Gothic rural retreat in the 1860's. The Mac-O-Chee castle is one of two castles owned by the Piatt brothers.

The final stop of this tour will be Marie's Candies located in West Liberty. Winfred King, who was struck with Polio in 1941, started the business. Winfred and his wife began giving candies as a way to express their gratitude to fellow farmers who aided their young farm family. Today it is located in a restored train depot.

If attendees just can't get enough of the great Holstein cow while at home, they can join Ohio members in visiting a diverse group of Ohio's premier herds. Four Henry Holsteins are located just outside of West Liberty. They currently milk over 250 registered Holsteins in a four-year-old facility with a double 12 parallel parlor. Bob and Nyla Henry along with their sons Doug, Dean, and Mark have combined their efforts to establish a well-respected type and production herd with plans to expand in the near future. They are also proud of their grandchildren's Junior All-American nominations in 1998 and 1999.

Hickory Plains, owned by Randy and Jayne Rausch, are located 10 miles from Select Sires in Milford Center. The Hickory Plains prefix can be found on numerous bulls in the Holstein Red Book and continue to supply large A.I. demands from the foundation Pete Bubbles family.

Oakvale established the new family operation nearly five years ago, after relocating from the heavily developed Columbus area. Dale and Jean King and daughter Elizabeth and son-in-law, Randy Finke are currently milking 45 cows after hosting the Oakvale Breeder's Invitational in 1999. The herd has a BAA of 110.2 with a Rolling Herd Average of over 23,000M. Oakvale, home of several All-American nominations.

Stan-Mar-Dale and Express Holsteins is located one hour west of Columbus. A family owned operation for 95 years. Dale and Marilyn Smith and daughter Kim and son-in-law Tony Brosches comprise Stan-Mar-Dale with partners Express Holsteins-Jeremy Adams and Cindy Howman. These partners have bred and developed 14 All-Ohio winners in 1998 and 1999 along with 4 Junior All-American nominations. They are also a Top a-Value Herd, Top 200 BAA herd-108.0, and a PBR Herd with a Rolling Herd Average over 22,000M. Cattle are housed in an older freestall barn with a four-year-old 14-Cow boxstall barn for foundation females.

Scientists Decode Genetic Makeup Of Rice

PARK RIDGE, Ill. — Scientists have decoded the genetic makeup of rice and will share the data with researchers around the world. The information will enable researchers to greatly accelerate the development of more nutritious and higher yielding rice.

The rice genome sequence is the first crop genome to be described in such technical detail, and will provide a new level of understanding of almost all the genes in rice.

A new gene sequencing approach produced the data primarily in the laboratories of Dr. Leroy Hood, at the University of Washington in Seattle, under contract for Monsanto.

This information will provide countries and research institutions with the ability to accelerate development of improved types of rice. In the years ahead, rice with better nutritional value, greater yields, and more adaptable to seasons, climates and soils will be developed, both through traditional methods of crop improvement (breeding) and biotechnology.

This research may also lead to the development of rice varieties that require less environmental resources, including land and water, and utilize natural resources more effectively.

Monsanto's data will be made available to the International Rice Genome Sequencing Project (IRGSP), a 10-member consortium of rice genome sequencing projects around the world.

Mapping of the rice genome sequence is expected to lead to similar developments in other major crops such as corn and wheat.

Monsanto will make its data available to researchers outside the international rice sequencing program. "We want to facilitate and encourage basic research to improve rice and other crops. This is a concrete example of our support for global agricultural research," said Hendrik Verfaillie, president of Monsanto Company. No fees will be charged to scientists for the use of this information, he said.

Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association
DHIA Service Center, Orchard Road, University Park, PA 16802

Question: Our heifers start very slowly at freshening time while our cows seem to start normally. The same diet is fed to both heifers and cows so where can we make changes to help our heifers?

Heifer performance can be tracked separately from the rest of the herd. Look for this separation on both summary reports on your PA DHIA records. Another place where we can look at first lactation animals by themselves is the Nitrogen Management Analysis Report (commonly called the MUN report).

The MUN report in this herd shows some interesting numbers. The first number we look at is the herd average mun. At 9.3, this herd falls somewhat short of the normally expected range of 10 to 14. Certain trends on the report indicate herd management practices. The first is that a tight range of low to high in mun values usually tells me this is a TMR fed herd. Secondly, when the trend is to see mun values rise as we increase days in milk, we often find that this is a single ration TMR. Both trends were seen on this farm. If we stop here, the only conclusion is that production could be increased if we increase protein feeding in this herd slightly.

The next step in analyzing this herd is to look at numbers on the MUN report that may stand out as being odd. Here we zero in on the first lactation animals. The average of the group that makes up more than a third of the herd 9.2. Again, although this average matches up with the herd average mun, we need to look further

It is quite evident in the herd that something is different about heifer performance especially in early stages of lactation.

I had the opportunity to pay a visit to this dairy family. Some of my observations were true when we matched up records with what was happening on the farm. This is a single ration TMR fed herd with no separation of heifers from the older cows. Bunk space was just adequate - 100 feet of bunk fed both sides plus one four foot wide end for 102 total cows. Feeding was twice daily. Cleanup of refusal feed was once daily. Pounds of refusal were about 200 pounds. This calculated out to less than two percent of the total feed.

Combining what we saw in production trends and MUN analysis with physical observations on the farm, we have these thoughts. The main problem holding back heifer performance is bunk management. Diets that are well formulated can only work to full potential when cows have unlimited access to them. The thought of saving labor and feed cost by limiting refusal feed to such small amounts will rob cows of production and profit potential. Now add to this the fact that heifers must compete with more mature herdsmates for feed and we have the current problem.

I once heard that arriving at conclusions is our way of wanting to stop thinking about our business. I certainly do not want to stop thinking about my job, so without conclusion I will leave you with this thought, "The last bite that your cows take is the most profitable bite." Manage feeding for that!

County Accepts Acreage Reports

YORK (York Co.) - The York County Farm Service Agency (FSA) is accepting 2000 crop acreage reports.

The 1996 Farm Bill removed the acreage report requirement in most cases for county farmers to remain eligible for USDA benefits. However, the commodity loan program and loan deficiency payment program still requires that filed acreage reports by those who wish to pledge stored commodities as collateral for these nine-month loans.

Producers interested in reporting must visit the county office, review aerial photographs and indicate the location of their crops. The office is located at 170 Pleasant Acres Road in York. Appointments are encouraged. Call ahead to have the aerial photos mailed to you to mark at home. This will significantly reduce time spent in the office.

Final certification dates are:

May 1 - hay

June 15 - wheat, barley and oats and

July 15 - corn, soybeans, fruit, and vegetables

Brothers Work Long Hours To Open Vet Clinic

JAYNE SEBRIGHT

Lancaster Farming Staff

DOVER (York Co.) — Doctors Dan and Dave Pike know what it takes to build a successful veterinarian clinic. It takes 24-hour days and an excellent partner. That's why they made a pact before either one attended vet school that they would be partners in veterinarian medicine.

Only a year and a half after the Pikes opened the Dover Area Animal Hospital, they have grown from a handful of large animal and no small animal clients to more than 3,000 small animal customers, 70 to 75 dairy herds, some beef herds, and a few sheep and goat customers.

But the Pikes' interest in veterinarian medicine didn't start anywhere close to Dover. In fact, that interest originated half way around the world. The Pikes grew up in Heidelberg, Germany, and worked on farms over there.

"The farms where we lived in Germany are very similar to farms in the United States, although the herds are smaller and the quota system exists in Germany," said Dan. "All of agriculture is more regulated in Europe than over here."

The Pikes moved with their family to the Dover area in 1986. Dan started college at Penn State York, and Dave started at William Penn High School. After two years at Penn State York, Dan transferred to the University of Kiel in Northern Germany. He finished up the last year of his undergraduate work and all four years of vet school at the University of Tennessee.

Dave followed in Dan's footsteps by studying at Penn State York for three years and then getting an early transfer to the University of Tennessee's vet school. Dan graduated from vet school in 1995, while Dave graduated in 1997.

"We both wanted to be vets since we were twelve years old," said Dan. "I knew I needed a partner that I could depend on, so before I went to vet school, I made Dave promise that he would do it, too."

To reach their goal, the Pikes had to go through several big hurdles. The first was getting into vet school as out-of-state students. They both needed to maintain a 3.8 grade point average in college. The second hurdle was getting through vet school.

"Eight kids dropped out of vet school while I was there," said Dave. "There were only 52 in my graduating class."

The third and probably the biggest hurdle was opening up their own clinic together. "We didn't have any money, our starting salaries were low, and we had high debt from school," said Dan. "Nobody in their right mind was going to loan us the money we needed to start the clinic."

So they achieved their dream the old-fashioned way — through hard work. When Dan graduated from vet school, he started working at the Northside Veterinarian Clinic in Cumberland County as a large animal vet.

With the money he earned at Northside, he purchased a run-down carpet store in Dover to renovate into the clinic. Fortunately the past owner was willing to finance the property for Dan.

After working all day, Dan worked on renovating the house and gutting the entire building to prepare it for the clinic. It took an entire year for him to gut the building, put a new roof on it, and get it ready for the contractors.

In 1997, Dave graduated and went to work for Northside, too. After the contractors finished the walls, framing, electric, plumbing, and heating, the Pikes did all of the finishing to the building after their regular working hours. A family friend, Steve Smith, also helped renovate the building.

In January 1999, the Pikes opened their practice. But the hard work didn't stop there. "From January to July, Dave and I both worked three jobs," said Dan.

When they opened the clinic, the Pikes started out with only three to four customers each day. So they continued working at the Northside Vet Clinic while they built up their customer base.

Putting a lot of miles on his truck, Dan travels throughout the Cumberland, York, and Adams county area to work with dairy, beef, sheep, and goat herds.

Dave would work at the Northside Clinic all day, while Dan would be out working with large animal clients in Cumberland and York counties. They had a receptionist at the Dover Area Animal Hospital, taking calls and scheduling appointments for after 5 p.m.

If a customer had an emergency, then Dan would have to fit it in between his large animal calls. In the evenings, either Dan or Dave would take care of the regular clients at Dover and handle emergency calls for both the Dover Area Clinic and Northside Clinic, while the other one would work a full shift at a local emergency hospital.

"It felt like we were working 28 hours a day," said Dave. "But we were willing to work because we wanted our own clinic and didn't want to wait."

According to Dan, most veterinarians practice for 10 or more years before they can start their own business.

"Not only were we opening our own clinic only one and a half years after Dave graduated, we also had to support two veterinarian salaries," said Dan. "That's why we worked additional jobs."

Currently the Pikes are devoting all of their time to Dover Area Animal Hospital but still work long hours. Typically Dave will see 35 to 40 regular small animal clients and does four to five surgeries every day for six days out of the week. Dan averages eight to twelve calls with large animal customers every day seven days out of the week.

"Right now we're still very busy, but we're more content," said Dan. "We're hoping to hire another veterinarian soon to help us out."

Both Dan and Dave are on call 24 hours a day. This is one of the benefits of having both a small and large animal practice.

"Most small animal vets work only normal office hours," said Dave. "I typically see between 10 and 12 new clients each week on an emergency basis because we're on call 24 hours a day."

"We're expanding to 8,000 square feet in the next year," said Dan. "We're putting in a dog and cat grooming facility and will have more space for the hospital and office area."

"It has always been a team effort," said Dave. "We do have our disagreements every now and then, but you couldn't have a better partner than your own brother."

Dave often does surgeries on Sundays to work around his regular small animal appointments and to get the assistance of Dan, who is out with farmers most hours of every day.

Farmers, Environmentalists Hold Similar Values Regarding Pollution

COLLEGE PARK, Md — Environmentalists may have a surprising ally in the fight to prevent pollution in the lower Eastern shore's waterways: farmers.

Results from an ongoing study conducted by a team of University of Maryland anthropologists shows that the same farmers who routinely have been accused of being the source of water pollution, specifically the toxic algae bloom Pfiesteria, consider themselves true environmentalists. It also suggests environmentalists might be better served by tapping into farmers' expertise as a credible resource in their efforts to protect the area's natural resources.

Since summer 1998, Maryland anthropologist Michael Paolisso, Erve Chambers, and Shawn Maloney have been using in-depth interviews and questionnaires to understand cultural beliefs and values regarding the environment and pollution among farmers and environmentalists. The researchers found that both groups share similar values toward preserving the conserving the environment although they differ on the effectiveness of voluntary self-regulation among farmers as a strategy to protect the environment.

"These farmers and environmentalists talk the same talk. They are equally passionate about protecting the environment," said Paolisso. "Neither one wants to see the water or the land polluted. Based on their values, they are natural allies."

The study also identified a clear "farmer environmentalist" point of view among the Delmarva peninsula's poultry and grain farmers that is consistent in scope with views commonly held by environmentalists. Many of the farmers, who run the area's 5,800 broiler houses that produce 606 million birds annually, consider themselves "real environmentalists" whose livelihoods are dependent on the quality of their land and environment, thus making them very concerned about pollution.

Farmers also expressed deep feeling of disenfranchisement following the Pfiesteria scare in the late '90s, when they were branded as polluters, putting a question their integrity. Resentment and bitterness built up when outside groups began calling for tough regulations of farmers. Farm owners and operators for years have used best management practices to regulate themselves in fact, Delmarva farms had one of the most successful voluntary nutrient management programs in the nation. However, according to the study, when farmers felt they were being accused of knowingly — and unknowingly — polluting the Bay and its tributaries, they dug their heels in and assumed an adversarial stance against environmentalists. Farmers believed they were viewed as part of the problem, instead of part of the solution.

In interviews, farmers expressed beliefs that environmentalists saw an opportunity in the "Pfiesteria hysteria" to push long-standing water quality issues by unfairly and unscientifically targeting poultry and grain farmers on the lower Eastern Shore as the Pfiesteria culprits. The farmers felt alienated and ignored, and rallied against nutrient management regulations.

"By not tapping into the expertise that these farmers can provide, we are losing resources to improve water quality. Our study shows that an adversarial relationship among farmers and environmentalist groups is not inevitable," said Maloney. "Rather, these groups have much more in common than it would appear on the surface. The health of the water and land on the lower Eastern Shore depends on highlighting these similarities in points of view, respecting the differences in core values and beliefs, and realizing that consensus building by environmentalists and government agencies among farmers can provide new insight for environmental health solutions."

Ultimately, the research shows that incorporating farmers into key decision-making processes is essential in garnering farmer support.

Case Tractor Sets World Record

CREPY-EN-VALOIS, France — In a marathon demonstration of productivity and durability, a Case IH 9380 Quadtrac tractor pulling a 17-furrow reversible plow turned almost 518 acres (209.43 hectares) of ground in a 24-hour period.

The performance significantly exceeded the previous world record for moldboard plowing in a one-day period of just under 446 acres (180.36 hectares).

"We're very proud to reclaim our place in the 'Guinness Book of World Records,'" said Jan Rintamaki, Case IH application marketing manager for cash grains. "But more importantly, this feat demonstrates the Case IH commitment to providing our customers' superior, productivity-enhancing technology."

A Case IH 7250 Magnum tractor initially set the record with a 9-furrow Lemken plow, covering 315.6 acres (127.7 hectares). Later, a four-wheel-drive John Deere tractor broke that record and held the honor until the recent Quadtrac effort.

Three French Case IH retail specialists - Jean Imbert, Herve Lenoir, and Michel Sachot - initiated the recent world record attempt in cooperation with French plow manufacturer Gregoire & Besson and B.P. lubricants. Gregoire & Besson created the world's largest plow for this event.

The record-breaking event took place on the sandy, damp soils of the Trounquet at Sore in southwestern France - the same field where the previous Deere record was set. Jean Imbert operated the 30-ton, 98-foot (30-meter) tractor and plow for 24 hours non-stop, plowing a width of more than 28 feet with each pass. Refueling was completed on the go, and no mechanical or technical pit-stops were needed.

A Case IH 9380 Quadtrac tractor and Gregoire Besson 17-furrow reversible plow significantly exceeded the previous 24-hour plowing world record, demonstrating the tractor's high productivity. The new record of 518 acres will be included in the next issue of the "Guinness Book of World Records."

"The Quadtrac tractor once again proved its reliability and efficiency in the toughest conditions," Imbert said. "It pulled the plow with perfect regularity over soil that was particularly heavy at about 11 kilometers per hour (6.8 MPH). Our average depth was 27 centimeters (10.6 inches)."

To track progress, the Case IH team made use of Advanced Farming Systems (AFS) technology.

Consider Several Factors When Selecting Alfalfa Varieties

DES MOINES, Iowa — The dry fall and relatively mild winter likely has had little negative impact on alfalfa stands across the country to date, but the weather could have a great impact on stand establishment this spring. Seedbed management will be key to getting alfalfa off to a good start.

"Growers have been asking 'how has the dry fall affected alfalfa?' The good news is, it probably has had little impact on alfalfa stand persistence and the plant's ability to come through the winter," said Bruce Tourbier, Pioneer field agronomist from Rosendale, Wis. "It's always better to have a dry fall rather than a wet one. We're cautiously optimistic there will be minimal stand loss this spring."

Wet fall weather can stress alfalfa plants and exacerbate disease pressure. In this situation, the plants will not put adequate food reserves into the roots for winter survival. Energy-deficient plants are more susceptible to winter kill.

This spring, lack of moisture may be the cause of stress on alfalfa seedlings. According to Tourbier, with this year's mild conditions, Wisconsin alfalfa growers may be seeding as early as mid-March. Seedbed preparation and management will be very important if the conditions remain dry.

"When you open up the field, it will be critical to prepare the soil and get the seed in right away to conserve moisture," said Tourbier. "Roll the field before and after seeding to get out the air pockets and ensure good seed-to-soil contact. Monitor the seed depth and be careful not to bury the seed. One-quarter to 1/2-inch is ideal planting depth."

"With early seeding, producers also may want to ask their seed representative if seed is available with a seed treatment such as Apron XL* to protect against seedling diseases," he said.

Before growers seed, careful attention to variety selection is the first step to long stand life and a positive return on investment in the alfalfa crop. University of Vermont extension forage agronomist Sid Bosworth says if the goal is to maintain quality forage for a 4- to 5-year stand life, soil fertility, cutting management and variety selection are the big factors to success. In selecting a variety look first at winter-hardiness ratings.

Disease resistance along with yield is high on the list of considerations for Julie Hansen, research associate in the Plant Breeding department at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y. In addition, Hansen recommends trying more than one variety on your farm.

"When reviewing alfalfa yield trial data, there is a top-yielding variety and then a group of top performers. Remember, while the top-yielder is numerically higher than the other top performers in the test, there may be little or no statistical difference in their performances," Hansen said. "By selecting several varieties you can take advantage of more good choices that are available and have a greater chance of finding varieties that will work well in your unique environment."

Check University and seed company trials, and remember the most relevant information will come from trial locations similar to your farm.

For all three experts, resistance to potato leafhopper is a final consideration. They see leafhopper resistance as a valuable management tool in areas where leafhopper pressure reaches treatment thresholds.

Massey Ferguson Incorporates Advanced Engineering

ATLANTA, Ga. — Massey Ferguson has transformed its entire product line in the past 24 months to meet the needs of customers in the new millennium.

"During the past two years, we've either replaced or updated every product in the Massey Ferguson lineup," said Jack Murdoch, Massey Ferguson vice president, marketing. "That includes MF rotary and conventional combines, MF swathers, and MF tractor models from 16 hp compacts to 225 hp high performance agricultural tractors."

"New models, more options and advanced engineering in all MF products are a result of the commitment by AGCO Corporation, our parent company, to MF product development and innovation," said Murdoch. "After 36 consecutive years as the world's best-selling brand of tractors, Massey Ferguson is now positioned to continue its leadership position into the next millennium."

"We developed several new tractor series, each engineered to meet unique customer needs. Within each series, there are specific models designed to meet specific customer requirements," said Murdoch. "Our 'Operator First' engineering approach produced new, easier to use, performance-packed operating features that get the most from engine horsepower and tractor configurations."

"Finally, the almost limitless ability to tailor features and options to customer needs ensures our new Massey Ferguson millennium product line offers both maximum value and maximum productivity."

Massey Ferguson's past engineering innovations include Electronic Linkage Control, Datatronic™ monitoring, Dynashift™ transmissions, and Fieldstar™ yield monitoring technology. Now MF adds to the list with new Powershift and Powershuttle transmissions.

Other new features available on select MF tractor models include the capability to use front-end attachments, VisiRoof (glass-top) cabs, and the unique Power Control system with left-hand fingertip clutch control and forward and reverse change of direction, leaving the right hand free to operate linkage and hydraulic controls.

New Massey Ferguson tractor model numbers classify tractors according to features that meet individual customer needs. "1" series tractors are value-priced with the basic features needed for a wide range of applications. "3" series tractors offer value with added features for increased productivity. "5" series tractors are feature-packed with cutting-edge technology designed to get the most from engine horsepower and tractor configuration.

STRATEGIES FOR KEEPING YOUR MOST VALUED EMPLOYEES

John Berry
Agricultural Marketing Agent
Lehigh County

While it is true that higher salaries offered by other organizations may be a threat to your employee retention efforts, research shows that traditional pay programs are ineffective for motivating high-performing, committed employees.

Companies will lose their most valued employees if they fail to offer them the intangible intrinsic rewards that money cannot buy. In fact, studies have shown that what tends to stimulate and encourage top performance, growth, and loyalty is praise and recognition.

Providing employees with opportunities to learn pays dividends for both the organization and the employees. The employer gains workers who are better skilled, more versatile in their work assignments, and motivated because they are challenged and encouraged to grow. Employees get the opportunity to learn new skills, gain new ways of viewing things, and network with co-workers.

A key part of any retention strategy should include adopting flexible work arrangements — it is the benefit employees want most. A recent survey by a employee placement company found that 76 percent of workers polled would leave the career fast-track in exchange for a more flexible schedule. And, almost 66 percent say they would take a pay cut in exchange for more flexibility.

change for more flexibility.

Exploring the child care needs of your employees will help you determine what types of assistance would be most meaningful and widely used. Sit down and talk with your employees. Ask questions and listen. You might be surprised how much useful information you will uncover.

Retaining employees today is harder than ever. Skilled workers are — and will continue to be — the most important asset of any organization. Successful organizations realize this and create a culture that fosters a sense of trust, loyalty, and commitment. Employees must know that if they work hard and are loyal they will be appreciated and valued.

It's on this belief that successful companies were founded — and it is on this belief that they will survive.

Dr. Robert Weber, Mechanicsburg, left, was honored recently at the 2000 Extension Annual Meeting for his outstanding leadership and service to the county. Shown with Weber is Samuel Simmons, Mechanicsburg, vice president of the board of directors and recipient of a framed certificate recognizing his six years of service to the Penn State Cooperative Extension Association. Weber was also recognized by the Pennsylvania House of Representatives for his efforts in the past 50 years.

Jointly Sample Jersey Sires

SHAWANO, Wis. — With the popularity the Jersey breed is experiencing world-wide, Genex Cooperative and Livestock Improvement Corporation (LIC) of New Zealand have introduced a joint program for sampling Jersey sires.

Cows will be selected for flushing in the U.S. based on pedigree, conformation, Net Merit, and converted New Zealand breeding values. New Zealand cows will be selected by using the same criteria, focusing on cows with high breeding values for milk, fat, and protein production and functional type.

Mating sires used for the flushes will be a combination of U.S. and New Zealand bulls being used by both organizations as sires of sons.

Bulls resulting from the embryos purchased will enter the joint sampling program. The bulls will be available to herds enrolled in the Genex sampling program and will be sampled simultaneously in the U.S. and New Zealand. Of the 24 Jersey sires sampled annually by Genex, five will come from the joint program with LIC.

The program will offer producers the opportunity to use unique pedigree combinations in their breeding program, including bloodlines new to both countries. It will also help identify bloodlines and cow families that will perform well in traditional management programs as well as in a grazing system.

New Zealand, with the largest Jersey population in the world, offers LIC the opportunity to sample 100 Jersey sires annually. Their Breeding Worth (BW) index is relatively similar to Net Merit in the U.S., reflecting an animal's overall profitability by placing economic values on production and longevity.

Two young sires are available for sampling through this new joint program of Genex and LIC.

Congressman Questions EPA On Water Quality Issues

GLENMONT, N.Y. — New York Congressman Sherwood Boehlert recently released a report that concluded that the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is not capable of determining the quality of U.S. waters.

The report also states that the EPA should not make major regulatory decisions on water quality.

This report, released by the General Accounting Office (GAO) entitled "Key EPA and State Decisions Limited by Inconsistent and Incomplete Data," was requested by Congressman Boehlert last year out of concern for the accuracy of decisions being made in relation to the Clean Water Act.

"We appreciate Congressman Boehlert's efforts to ensure sound scientific data is being used to make decisions on water quality," stated John W. Lincoln, president, New York Farm Bureau. "Unfounded or inadvertent decisions regarding water quality can have potentially devastating effects on New York farms."

The GAO has also been requested to analyze the costs to agriculture and forestry sectors from additional water quality regulations proposed by EPA. Concerns of the House Agriculture Committee are that the EPA has not been working adequately with the USDA on water quality planning and management regulations regarding total maximum daily loads (TMDLs). This is another example of an area where the EPA must be monitored.

"We are thankful that Congressman Boehlert had the foresight last year to begin an inquiry into the EPA," said Lincoln. "We believe that maintaining water quality should be the responsibility of the state, and in order to do so, we need reliable data. Congressman Boehlert's efforts will help to ensure that states will have the best resources available to make the best possible decisions for all New York citizens."

Sure Stand Grass Seeders

THE ERGONOMICS OF USING A BRILLION "SURE STAND" SEEDER

Grass seed is a very expensive commodity. By properly placing the grass seed in the top 1/2" of a properly prepared seedbed you will realize maximum seed germination.

Because of Brillion's precision placement of the seeds, seeding rates can often be cut to nearly half of the rates previously used. In many cases the savings in seed alone will pay for a "Sure Stand" Seeder in just a short time.

Don't risk your crop to another system. Don't settle for less. Use the one seeding method that you can depend on to produce a top stand time after time...a Brillion Sure Stand Seeder.

CALL 1-800-FARMTIRE. GOOD YEAR As American As Farming.

Gettysburg Senior Citizen Educates People About Environment

Mildred displays the curriculum materials that she provided to students who got involved with Soil and Water Stewardship Day. This event was just one of Mildred's activities as environmental technician for the Conservation District.

Working side by side with her husband on their farm for most of her life helps Mildred Musselman relate to farmers working with the Conservation District. It also motivates her to educate the community about conservation.

JAYNE SEBRIGHT

Lancaster Farming Staff

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.)

— Mildred Musselman gets up at 5:30 a.m. every morning, goes to work from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Adams County Conservation District, and then goes home to work in her rock garden and lawn for most of the evening.

Maintaining the energy of a 25 year old, Mildred went to work at the Conservation District in 1989 when she turned 65 years old. Last year was her tenth year anniversary with the District.

Mildred and her husband Arthur farmed on their 162-acre farm in Gettysburg until Arthur passed away in 1985. They raised grain and poultry. "I was involved in every aspect of the farm," said Mildred.

After Arthur's death, Mildred began renting the farm to a local farmer. Then, in 1989, the farmer who was renting her farm encouraged her to apply at the Conservation District.

"He told me they needed someone down there to work with the farmers," said Mildred. "Since I was a farmer, he thought I would be able to communicate well with other farmers."

Mildred's first job at the District was to do Chesapeake Bay assessments for Adams County farmers. "I started out interviewing farmers and collecting information about their operations."

Shortly after starting, she became a Chesapeake Bay technician and helped farmers develop conservation plans. "I always enjoyed working with the farmers because they spoke my language and I spoke theirs," she said.

Just last year Mildred switched responsibilities after working as a Chesapeake Bay technician for ten years to become an environmental technician. Now, instead of working with farmers, she'll be educating students, teachers, and the community about conservation and environmental issues.

"With my new position, I'll be able to educate the general public on environmental issues related to farming," said Mildred. "This will be my chance to give back to the farm community."

Mildred is one of seven full-time employees at the District. About 50 percent of the work done there involves farmers in some way. Mildred is the first to work solely with the community and education programs.

Some of her responsibilities will include promoting Soil and Water Stewardship Day and Earth Day. For Soil and Water Stewardship Day, she supplied schools with educational materials for the students to study prior to attending environmental camps.

With Earth Day quickly approaching, Mildred has been busy distributing seeds to senior citizens clubs throughout the county and coordinating a tree seedling sale. She also helped the Watershed Alliance of Adams County monitor local stream water to solve environmental problems.

National Infant Immunization Week Reminds Parents 'You Gave Them Life - Protect It'

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Caring parents do whatever possible to protect their children from situations that could cause brain damage, bodily injury, or death. Except, perhaps, they don't make sure that all immunizations are up to date.

Some parents, fearful of side effects and who may lack information on immunization, are skeptical of the need for immunization and do not have children vaccinated against tetanus, diphtheria, polio, measles, mumps, Hib, chicken pox, and hepatitis B.

This puts their children at risk not only for contracting the illnesses but also complications from the diseases, which can cause seizures, brain damage, deafness, other physical handicaps and even death. It also can cause others to contract these vaccine-preventable diseases.

"You gave them life — protect it," is the motto for the National Immunization Week, April 16-22. National Infant Immunization week gives the Lancaster County Immunization Coalition the opportunity to bring to the community an increased awareness for the need to vaccinate children at an early age. Infant immunization is simple and inexpensive.

Failure to see that children are properly vaccinated is often based on myths, according to Elaine Zuck, nurse at the Lancaster County site of the Pa. Department of Health. Some of these myths include the following:

- "I've never seen these diseases and I don't think they exist anymore."

"The reason few children contract polio, diphtheria, and many of the formerly common childhood diseases is because of immunization. Decrease the rate of immunization, and the incident of disease goes up," Zuck said.

- "Vaccines can make my child sick and might even cause death."

"Vaccines are very safe and effective," Zuck insists. "It is extremely rare to have significant side effects to vaccines especially since the release of the newer and safer vaccine DTaP, which causes fewer and milder reactions than the formerly used DTP. Experience and research does not support the myth that vaccines cause the disease they are intended to prevent."

- "Vaccines hurt and I hate to see my child get a shot."

The reality is that temporary discomfort from an injection is soon forgotten and nothing compared to the excruciating pain of contracting one of the diseases.

Before attending school, Pennsylvania law requires that children must have had the following immunizations: four doses of tetanus and diphtheria, three doses of polio, two doses of measles, one dose of mumps and rubella, and three doses of hepatitis B. The only exemptions from this law are for medical or religious beliefs.

The medical profession believes that parents who shun immunizations because of religious beliefs should reconsider. They have seen heart-rending stories of babies and children who die or are permanently damaged because they were not immunized.

Although immunizations are

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards) Joyce Bupp

All the bunnies out there are being run ragged today.

What with those millions of baskets to pack with colorful plastic straw and candy, plus hours of poking eggs into creative hiding spots, it's enough to make a rabbit's whiskers twitch overtime.

At least in our neighborhood, the overworked Easter bunnies can skip decorating all those hard-boiled eggs before they hide 'em. Our grandsons have been working at those for weeks.

Coloring Easter eggs is just another of the many "projects" their mom and dad may come up with to keep them busy and doing creative and learning things each day. These "projects" range from designing holiday cards (perfect for grandparents' refrigerators) to planting gardens to picking up woodstove kindling to building snowmen to creating artwork with stickers.

One sticker "project" that comes to mind was particularly notable. And costly. It included a 3-year-old's use of several-dollars-worth of colorful, adhesive, U.S. postage stamps.

Based on personal observation and participation, here are a few handy reminders for making one last Great Easter Egg Project at your household a memorable time for you and your favorite kids, before moving on to the next holiday.

1. Put a dozen - at least, but preferably more if you have several artists - eggs into a pan, cover with cold water, and bring to a boil. While waiting, remove everything with several feet of surface where the egg coloring will take place and cover that surface liberally with old newspapers. Assign specific seats to children who are squabbling over who sits where. If a grandma is handy, strategically locate her between children to help maintain order.

2. When eggs reach the boiling point, cover pan, reduce to a very low simmer for 8-10 minutes. Meanwhile, assemble assorted egg coloring materials such as non-toxic vegetable dyes, cotton-tipped swabs as "paintbrushes," small, deep, non-tipping dishes for dipping eggs into color and assorted decorative materials, including if desired, stickers. (Hide postage stamps.) Slice a cardboard/styrofoam egg carton into sections to "park" hot eggs in while painting to avoid having them roll to floor. Separate the pair of siblings who are painting designs on each other.

3. Retrieve the assorted egg art materials from the sibling who has ascertained that he/she needs all the materials at his/her place. Wipe tears from the eyes of others and confidently assure them that all will share.

4. Remove eggs from water as needed and assign one at a time to each artist. Wipe up of pink dye from container which has tipped and soaked newspaper, table and puddled on floor. Duck flying spatters of color being exuberantly applied by older ones. Grab for runaway egg headed for floor.

5. Feed dog broken egg pieces from floor.

6. Monitor that dyed eggs are not returned to boiling kettle to be washed and re-worked.

7. Pile eggs in basket, give additional badly-cracked one to dog. Remove kids to outdoors and hide eggs in strategic places. Avoid falling over dog begging for more eggs.

8. Explain to wailing "finders" that the "hider" is not stealing their eggs.

9. Offer hunting tips to younger "finders": "There, right at your feet, in the grass." Remove tricycle and explain that riding into the hidden eggs is unacceptable. Feed dog the egg smashed by the tricycle.

10. Put kids down for naps. Clean up wet, pink newspaper. Clean up floor. Clean up egg pieces. Relocate snoring dog to porch.

11. Deliver remaining usable decorated eggs to grandma to recycle into redbeet eggs.

12. Restore your energy level by snitching a piece of Easter chocolate... and enjoy a happy and a blessed Easter!

series of teacher workshops," said Mildred. "I had to send it to the Department of Education for approval."

The workshops will be presented to fourth, seventh, and tenth graders in the county and will use the new Pennsylvania standards for environment and ecology.

"I do miss the interaction with farmers, but I enjoy educating people about conservation," said Mildred. "Besides, the farmers still stop by to say hello when they're in the office."

One of Mildred's projects in her new job has been to initiate a water-testing program. "People can bring in their water samples, and we'll send it to the Department of Environmental Protection lab for testing," said Mildred. "We use the samples to help them correct problems."

Because of the water-testing program, Mildred has had quite a few people inquiring what they should do about various problems with their wells and springs. "I try to help them figure out what they should be testing in their water," said Mildred.

While working at the Conservation District, Mildred has received several awards for her outstanding work with the farmers. She has also earned the respect and admiration of her co-workers.

"I really enjoy my job," said Mildred. "I like the interaction with people, and it gives me a reason to get up in the morning."

In addition to working a full-time job, Mildred still finds time to mow her lawn, keep a beautiful rock garden, and volunteer for various organizations. Sometimes she has evening events, such as the Adams County Farm City Festival committee meetings and other meetings.

Mildred is also very active in the Bethel Mennonite Church, where she is the Sunday school teacher for the adult class and is involved with the music program.

Mildred has three daughters and one son. Her daughter Carolyn Sell lives in California with her husband and two grown children. She is a school teacher. Joanne Musselman, Mildred's second daughter, is a curriculum coordinator for Palmyra School District in Dauphin County. Audrey Rapp is a stay at home mom, while Mildred's son Larry Musselman is a certified public accountant in Gettysburg.

Mildred attributes her ambition to keeping a positive outlook. "The Lord has blessed me with good health," said Mildred. "I really enjoy life and am just not ready to slow down yet."

Lancaster Society 20

On April 6, Lancaster Farm Women Society 20 met at the United Methodist Church, Quarryville, to entertain societies 5 and 15. About 45 members attended.

President Valarie Ferguson conducted the devotions, reading from Luke. After a reading a poem, she closed in prayer.

After the pledge of allegiance to the flag, a short business meeting was held. Members reported on the chicken they had in their childhood homes.

A very humorous and interesting program, Chicken Surprises, was given by Martee Mentzer, who recited joke upon joke about chickens such as why set a hen over boiling water - so she lays hard-boiled eggs, of course.

Mentzer brought more than 50 different items featuring chickens such as coverlets, plates, hand towels.

The Sunshine Committee sent three cards. The meeting adjourned after members sang their theme song, "Brighten the Corner."

Consuming Thoughts

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

Are you having trouble finding nutritious snacks for your children to eat? Have you ever wondered about the nutritional benefits of prepackaged veggies compared to fresh?

Don't be misled into thinking that ready-to-cook (or eat) vegetables are nutritionally superior. They should be thought of in the same category as frozen and canned products. All such processed foods, from a practical standpoint, are equally good for you.

Somewhere along the line people have gotten the idea that unless a fruit or vegetable is fresh it's completely worthless. That's just not so according to nutritionists. Pre-cut and bagged vegetables and those that have been frozen and even canned have, in the larger scheme of things, about the same nutritional value.

Consumers tend to think that there's some subtle hierarchy of "freshness" ranging in value from, say, a head of broccoli sitting on ice in the produce section (high in nutrients) to canned peas on the shelf (having none). To counter this idea, a study reported by the Institute of Food Technologists shows that by the time you stick the product in your mouth, the nutrient content is about the same regardless of whether it was fresh, frozen, or canned, because in the end, all of these require different amounts of further processing.

With the canned peas, for example, they need only be barely heated, while frozen peas require a bit more. Fresh peas, however, must be shelled, rinsed, and cooked considerably longer. So at some point along the line, all three "versions" have been subjected to about the same amount of heat to make them edible.

In addition, commercial processors typically pick right from the field and preserve the vegetables within hours, allowing less nutrient loss than occurs in that head of broccoli that's been trucked across the country, left to sit in the store for a day or two, taken home, stored even longer, and then overcooked.

The popularity of pre-cut vegetables packaged in plastic bags is definitely on the rise. Cost notwithstanding, they are very appealing to busy, health-conscious shoppers who'd like to eat more fresh fruits and vegetables but have less and less time to prepare them.

Remember - pre-cut vegetables packaged in plastic bags are a "processed" food. First, the vegetables are cut, then typically washed in a chlorine solution to kill harmful bacteria, and rinsed in plain water. They're placed in plastic bags that use a technology called "modified atmosphere packaging" to slow down nutrient loss and spoilage. How this works is that the plastic films used in the packages determine the amount of oxygen and carbon dioxide that can move in and out of the bag. Controlling this "respiration" (a natural occurrence that continues even after vegetables have been harvested) maintains nutrient quality significantly longer than if the same product sat out in the open air.

For this reason it's important to note the sell-by date on pre-cut vegetable products and to use them up promptly once the bag has been opened. When the "modified atmosphere" is torn, deterioration accelerates. Be sure the store displays bagged products in refrigerated cases, similar to those used for chilled orange juice, and keep them cold at home as well, as cold temperature is critical to product quality.

The important thing to remember is that the message reminding consumers to eat "Five a Day for Better Health" doesn't mean you have to eat garden fresh produce every day.

The form of those five servings really isn't that important. What counts is that you get them from your plate and into your mouth.

'You Gave Them Life

at an all-time high, "There are still too many children who have not had the state required immunizations," said Norine Mountcastle, Pennsylvania Department of Health immunization coordinator for the southeast district of Pennsylvania. "To be informed that a child has died from complications of a vaccine preventable disease is inexcusable."

Continual research is done to eliminate serious illnesses. One of the newer vaccines is called Hib, which stands for Haemophilus influenza type b, a serious disease caused by a bacteria that usually strikes children under 5 years old.

Before Hib vaccine, Hib disease was the leading cause of bacterial meningitis among children. About 20,000 children under 5 years old got severe Hib disease and about 1,000 died annually in the U.S.

Meningitis is an infection of the brain and spinal cord coverings, which can cause lasting brain damage and deafness. Hib disease can also cause pneumonia; severe swelling in the throat, making it hard to breathe; infections of the blood, joints, bones, and covering of the heart; and death.

Mountcastle said that dosages of the Hib vaccine should be given to children at 2, 4, 6, and 12-15 months of age.

Parents should not let the cost of immunization stand in the way. It costs only $5 per child at immunizations sites through the state Department of Health. To those in needy, free vaccines are also available through state health centers. Child Protect requires hospitals and health departments to provide free immunizations to underinsured or noninsured children.

"We never turn anyone away," Zuck said.

Parents should keep a record of their child's immunizations. These are needed for school entrance, college, and for jobs if they travel outside the country.

"The future health of children depends on decisions made now," Mountcastle said of the continual effort to have children immunized.

The Lancaster County Immunization Coalition is a community-based group that focuses on improving immunization rates of children and adults through community education and monitoring.

The Lancaster County Coalition meets monthly and wants new members. Meetings are conducted the first Wednesday of each month from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. at the Lancaster General Health Campus Wellness Center, Harrisburg Pike, Lancaster.

For more information on the Coalition, call Michelle Hargraves at (717) 290-3144.

Sniff Out Odor-Absorbing Produce

Ever crunched a carrot or munched an apple that tasted slightly different than normal? Chances are your taste buds raised a big stink about odors absorbed from other foods stored in close proximity.

Many fruits and vegetables tend to cause off-flavors and aromas in meat, dairy products and other fruits and vegetables, says Peter Ferretti, professor of vegetable crops in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"The closer and more enclosed the fresh produce is the more chance for odors to intermix," Ferretti says. "In an enclosed area like a refrigerator, odors really can be a problem. Consumers shouldn't experience startling taste changes three or four days after purchase, but beyond that you might have problems."

Kathleen Brown, associate professor of post-harvest physiology at Penn State, suggests that consumers try to rotate their produce purchases, using the oldest fruits and vegetables first so food items are not stored longer than a week to 10 days.

Ferretti warns that odors are more likely to be absorbed at higher temperatures, which means consumers should not intermingle refrigerated fruits and vegetables with produce that is commonly stored at or slightly below room temperature, such as apples and onions.

Ferretti says that not every consumer will notice a difference in taste. "Taste is a genetic trait," he explains. "Some people can sharply define tastes, and others have more bland taste ranges. Our sense of smell works in tandem with our taste buds, so an off-odor can affect how an apple tastes, even if the odor has not truly penetrated the skin."

Ferretti and Brown list some popular fruits and vegetables whose odors penetrate other foods.

-Apples. Apple odor is absorbed by cabbage, carrots, figs, onions, meat, eggs and dairy products. "Many consumers store apples in the refrigerator to keep them crisp, but in that space their odor may cause problems," Brown says.

-Carrots. Celery can absorb the odor of carrots. "it gives celery sort of an earthy taste," Ferretti says.

-Onions (large bulb types) and garlic. Aromas from bulb onions affect apples, celery, potatoes and pears.

-Green bunching or scallion onions. Odors from these onions affect corn, figs, greens and mushrooms. "Scallion odor will noticeably affect flavor," Ferretti adds.

-Pears. Pear odor is absorbed by cabbage, carrots, celery, onions and potatoes.

-Potatoes. Aromas from potatoes affect apples and pears. "Potatoes are almost always stored separately from other produce, so odor usually isn't a big problem," Ferretti says.

-Green peppers. Green pepper odor will be absorbed by many fruits, including pineapples. "Ripened green peppers, which usually are red, orange or yellow, do not have as strong an aroma," Ferretti says.

-Citrus fruit. Citrus odor is absorbed by meat, eggs and dairy products.

-Grapes. Most commercial grapes are treated with sulfur dioxide for disease and insect control, giving the fruit a sulfurous aroma. "produce experts say don't wash most fruits before refrigerating them, but grapes are the exception," Ferretti says. "By washing grapes thoroughly, the sulfur residue and smell will wash off. Also, people tend to snack on grapes, eating three or four at a time. They aren't as likely to wash a small number of grapes."

Brown suggests separating produce into individual bags, or using one crisper drawer only for fruits and another for vegetables. Bagged or wrapped produce is less likely to absorb or emit odors.

If produce has been stored long enough to absorb odors, Ferretti recommends using the fruit or vegetable in a soup, stew or casserole where the flavors and aromas will intermingle.

He also says consumers can counteract some of the odor absorption by placing a box of baking soda in the refrigerator, crisper drawer or pantry. "Baking soda also absorbs moisture," he says. "Baking soda can last quite a while because the top layer absorbs most of the odor and moisture, so homeowners can shake the top layer into the waste can and renew the treatment."

Identity Theft

The Growing Crime of Identity Theft It's supper time and your phone rings. You think, "Not another telemarketer!" The voice on the other end demands that you make a payment on the loan for furniture from Easy Sam's in Alpena, Michigan.

You're confused. You've never set foot in the state of Michigan. And you have never borrowed to buy furniture. But the speaker insists that you pay now or else.

What's going on? Chances are you are the victim of identity theft.

What is Identity Theft? Identity theft occurs when someone uses bits and pieces of information about another individual usually including their Social Security number to represent him or herself as that person for fraudulent purposes.

For example, the defrauding person may obtain credit cards or loans in someone else's name and then not pay the bills. Or worse, commit a crime using the victim's name.

While the victim is not liable for the bills accumulated by the imposter, the victim may have months or years of anxiety and expense trying to regain financial health and restore good credit history.

The Privacy Rights Clearinghouse in San Diego, CA reports that identity theft doesn't get the attention from law enforcement that violent crime receives. Consequently, an increasing number of criminals, including organized crime rings, are moving into this area. Identity thieves are rarely apprehended and convicted. And even if they are, sentencing is light.

How Can Someone Steal Your Identity? The U. S. General Accounting Office estimates that there are 400,000 victims of identity theft each year in this country and that number is increasing.

Just how does an identity thief get your personal information? Stealing wallets was the old-fashioned way to get another person's identity. Today the techniques are far more sophisticated. The criminal may pose as an employer, loan officer or landlord and order a copy of your credit report that will contain all the information needed. Identity thieves may "shoulder surf" at an ATM machine or pay phone in order to capture PINs (personal identification numbers). Your mail may be stolen from your mailbox. A "dumpster diver" may go through a business's trash looking for unshredded receipts. An "insider" with access to a company's computer may steal private information about customers or employees. More often than you would think, a family member, roommate or trusted caregiver may steal from someone whose personal effects are available to them.

The credit industry has made it very easy to obtain credit and credit grantors may not adequately check the identities of applicants before granting credit. Pre-approved credit card offers sent by mail are easy targets for thieves. Sloppy business practices such as throwing out unshredded documents or allowing dishonest employees access to computer files and personnel records are other ways that identity thieves can get your information.

Can You Protect Yourself? How can you minimize your exposure to identity theft? Do not carry extra credit cards, your Social Security card, birth certificate or passport in your wallet or purse except when you will need it. Remove your name from marketing lists to reduce the number of pre-approved offers of credit you receive. The three major credit bureaus use the same phone number, 1-888-567-8688, to handle such requests.

Shred or tear into small pieces any offers that come to you. Have a security fraud alert added to your credit files at the three major credit bureaus. This two-sentence statement mandates that before any new credit account can be opened, the credit grantor must call your designated phone number to verify that the account is legitimate. Install a locked mailbox or use a post office box. Mail any envelopes containing checks at the post office.

Carry just one or two credit cards. Cancel all unused accounts.

Contact your local Cooperative Extension office for a copy of a close credit account form letter or go to <http://AgExtEd.cas.psu.edu/FCS/cb/credit.html>. Look for "Credit Bureaus." Click on Close Credit Account Form Letter. Even if you don't use accounts they remain in your credit report complete with account numbers that can be used by thieves.

Keep a list of all credit cards, account numbers, expiration dates and phone numbers of their customer service and fraud departments in a secure place so you can immediately contact your creditors if the cards are stolen. Do the same with your bank accounts.

Never give your credit card number or other personal information over the phone unless you have a trusted business relationship with the company and you initiated the call.

Beware of fake stories about winning a prize if you identify yourself with your credit card.

Order your credit report from each of the three credit bureaus at least once a year to check for inaccuracies and fraudulent use of your information. Always take credit receipts with you; never toss them in a public trash container. When creating passwords and PINs don't choose part of your Social Security number, your birth date or any other easily discovered choice. Memorize your passwords and PINs.

Protect your Social Security number. Never give it out unless absolutely necessary. Don't print it on your checks or let merchants hand write it on your checks. Carefully review all credit card statements and phone bills for any unauthorized use.

What If You Are A Victim? If you are a victim of identity theft, act immediately. Report the crime to the police. Call your credit card issuers; follow up in writing.

Pay particular attention to creditors for accounts that have been tampered with or opened fraudulently. Phone the fraud units of the three credit reporting companies. Notify your bank of the theft. Keep a log of all conversations with businesses, including dates and names, about your identity theft problem. Send all correspondence by certified mail. Keep copies of all documents.

The Privacy Rights Clearinghouse, www.privacyrights.org, phone 619-298-3396, has lots of good, detailed advice on dealing with identity theft.

The Federal Trade Commission is the federal clearinghouse for consumer complaints about identity theft. The toll-free number to call is 877-FTC-HELP or use the complaint form at www.ftc.gov.

A Classic Easter Feast

After a long, dreary winter, Easter ushers in the euphoria of spring. Easter draws the family together in celebration—coloring eggs, filling baskets and sitting down to a delectable dinner.

Make Easter memorable with simple, but classic menu choices. The classic Easter feast stars a baked ham with a host of accompaniments. Add your own signature touches, such as Apple-Dijon chutney. Serve with irresistible chive mashed potatoes. Add the season's first tender asparagus spears, and for dessert, present moist apple cake with a dusting of powdered sugar.

Set the table with cheerful spring colors. Scatter a cluster of Easter eggs and a handful of tulips or daffodils for accents.

Plan ahead and purchase extra ingredients. Combined with the leftovers that follow any feast, you'll think of them as timesaving "investments." It's a reason to celebrate the day after.

- 3 Place ham in shallow roasting pan, cover with foil. Bake at 325°F for 1 1/2 to 2 hours or until meat thermometer inserted into the thickest part of ham reads 160°F. During last half hour of baking, remove foil and brush ham generously with remaining mustard mixture.

Get Money And Protect The Environment When You Recycle Gas-Powered Lawn Equipment

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, April 22, 2000-B7

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) - For the third consecutive year, the Pennsylvania Department of Environment Protection (DEP) is partnering with PPL Electric Utilities Corporation to help eliminate gas-guzzling lawn equipment, according to DEP Secretary James M. Seif.

Pennsylvanians who retire their old lawn equipment will receive rebates to be used toward the purchase of more environmentally-friendly electric-powered mowers and lawn tools. "This rebate program has two main goals - to improve air quality and to encourage 'green' consumer choices," said Seif, who retired his gas-powered lawn mower two years ago. "When each of us does our fair share, no matter how small, it all adds up to a cleaner environment for everyone."

The 2000 Clean Mower Rebate Program will be held 8 a.m.-1 p.m., May 6 at PPL's Lancaster Service Center, 651 Delp Road, Lancaster, and PPL's Lehigh Service Center, 827 Hausman Road, Allentown.

To participate, turn in a gasoline-powered lawn mower on May 6, and you will receive a coupon good for a $75 rebate on the purchase of a new, electric-powered lawn mower. People who turn in a gas-powered weed trimmer, edger, leaf-blower or chain saw will receive a $20 rebate toward the purchase of an electric-powered tool.

PPL employees will drain the oil and gas from the mowers and smaller lawn tools. The mowers, tools, oil and gas will all be recycled.

After buying an electric-powered lawn tool, return a copy of the store receipt along with the coupon to PPL, and you will be mailed a check. You can purchase your new electric lawn equipment anytime between March 1 and June 23. Remember, however, you can only turn in your old gas-powered equipment on May 6.

About 500 rebate coupons are available, and they will be given out on a first-come, first-serve basis. The offer is limited to one lawn mower and one small lawn tool per household.

Both Black & Decker and TORO will have equipment on display for you to try out, but this equipment will not be for sale. Customers can purchase electric lawn equipment at their favorite store and are not pressured into an immediate buying decision.

Attend Mennonite History Lecture

HINKLETOWN (Lancaster Co.) - The public is invited to an illustrated lecture on Swiss, Alsatian, German, and Pennsylvania Mennonite history, scheduled for the evening of May 4, at the Christian Aid Ministries warehouse near Hinkletown.

Beginning with scenes from the birth of Anabaptism in Zurich in the 1520's John L. Ruth of Montgomery County will visually follow the heritage of Mennonites and Amish in Lancaster County from Switzerland through several migrations in Europe and then to Pennsylvania after 1710. Such European areas as the Emmental in Bern, Alsace, the Rhine Valley, and the Kraichgau around Sinheim, Germany will be visited. The Pennsylvania scenes will be concentrated in the area which became present-day Lancaster County.

Presenter Ruth became familiar with Lancaster County during his high school years at the Lancaster Mennonite School, 1944-48. Having been ordained a minister in the Franconia Conference in 1950, he graduated from Eastern Baptist College with a major in English, followed by a doctorate in the same field from Harvard University in 1968. A year of teaching literature at the University of Hamburg introduced his family to the European Mennonite scene. Since 1973 he has served as historical commentator on many European tours on Mennonite history.

Having been asked by Franconia Mennonite leaders in the mid-1970's to work on topics of history and heritage, Ruth has written such books as "Conrad Grebel, Son of Zurich," "Twas Seeding Time: A Mennonite View of the American Revolution," and "Maintaining the Right Fellowship" (a history of the Franconia and Eastern District Mennonite Conferences). His most recent book, commissioned by the Lancaster Mennonite Historical Society, and entitled "The Earth is the Lord's: A Narrative History of the Lancaster Mennonite Conference," is now in press.

The scenes to be shown on May 4 are drawn from Ruth's 25 years of travel in Europe and Pennsylvania. Special emphasis include geographical features, farming, meetinghouses and family history. Ruth offers the lecture without charge, on behalf of current research bearing on Mennonite immigration to Pennsylvania, supported by various Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Ohio Mennonite and Amish groups. An offering will thus be taken for this purpose (no admission will be charged).

Beginning time for the May 4 meeting is 7:00 p.m. The Christian Aid Ministries warehouse is located at 2412 Division Highway, five miles east of Ephrata, on the north side of Route 322. For more information call (717) 354-4301 or 354-7139.

Far Infrared Rays (FIR) Health Builder

Within the magnetic spectrum, while some rays, such as light, can be seen by the unaided human eye, most are totally invisible to us. Far Infrared Rays (FIR) are well beyond the ability of the naked eye to see. FIR is capable of penetrating deep into the human body. It can gently and delightfully elevate the body's temperature. When it does so, it helps to expand capillaries which stimulates blood circulation. This increases the body's energy reserve, and accelerates the metabolic exchange between blood and body tissue. That's not all! FIR can actually increase the body tissue's regenerative ability. It also reduces abnormalities in nervous system and helps the autonomous system function properly.

Bunnies, chicks, colored eggs, and candy? How did all these Easter traditions originate?

According to some research, one of the earliest symbols of Easter was a chicken breaking out of its shell representing Christ's resurrection.

Eggs represent life and are believed to have been associated with hope and resurrection when St. Augustine compared the egg with hope of eternal life because the egg, like hope, is that which has not come to fruition.

The custom of decorating eggs goes back many thousands of years. Colored eggs were considered tokens of good will to proclaim the season of renewed life. The Dutch settlers in Pennsylvania are credited with bringing their native custom of coloring eggs at Easter to this country.

Rabbits symbolize fertility of springtime. In Germany, the hare or rabbit is almost as popular as Santa Claus is at Christmas in the United States. The hare and egg provide a link between welcoming spring and Easter celebration.

Brightly colored hardboiled eggs lend a festive air to spring holiday celebrations. If having a hippy, hoppity, happy Easter is on your list of activities, help ensure that by keeping eggs safe.

To make picture-perfect hard-cooked eggs, follow these easy steps:

- Allow eggs to warm to room temperature for about 15 minutes. This makes eggs easier to peel after cooking.

- Place eggs in wide saucepan. A single layer of eggs produces the best results.

- Add enough cold water to cover eggs by an inch and quickly bring the water to just boiling, then simmer 20 minutes.

- Remove from heat and cool in cold running water for about 5 minutes, this prevents the green coating on the yolk and helps the egg cool quickly to the proper cold temperature.

- Peel for immediate use or refrigerate for use within one week.

If you are hiding hardcooked eggs for an egg hunt, put them in places protected from dirt, pets, and other sources of bacteria. The total time for hiding and hunting eggs should be less than two hours.

Once they are found, promptly refrigerate eggs. If the eggs are not found and stored within the two-hour time frame, properly dispose of the decorated eggs away from the children and animals.

To eliminate food safety concerns, instead of edible eggs, use plastic Easter eggs filled with candy or non-edible items such as money, erasers, and toys.

Two 4-H leaders from Berks County attended the Pennsylvania State 4-H Leaders' Forum, March 31 to April 1 at the Days Inn in State College. The leaders participated in workshops focusing on topics that will help them become better teachers and counselors of youth. Leaders attending from Berks County were Jacqueline Hertzog, Birdsboro, and Teresa Yerger, East Greenville, pictured with Marilyn Corbin, state program leader for Children, Youth and Families.

4-H Leaders Provide Much-Needed Positive Relationships For Youth

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) - Today's youth appear to need positive relationships with adults more than ever, and 4-H leaders can fill that role, according to a 4-H specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

To help adult and teen 4-H leaders become better teachers and youth counselors, Penn State Cooperative Extension brought together more than 100 volunteers from across the state at the 2000 Pennsylvania State 4-H Leaders' Forum, March 31 to April 1 in State College.

"Pennsylvania has more than 10,000 adult 4-H leaders," said Robert Lewis, professor of 4-H youth. "Each year, these volunteers work with more than 125,000 rural and urban Pennsylvania youth between the ages of eight and 19. These volunteers give more than 20 days to 4-H youth - to the equivalent of more than 1,000 full-time teachers in the field, or a contribution worth more than $20 million."

4-H offers programs in subject areas such as environmental, science, clothing and textiles, jobs and careers, horsemanship, plant science, photography, health and safety, nutrition and global citizenship. Most 4-H clubs and projects include community service learning.

Today, 4-H also involves youth of varied races and cultures, youth with disabilities and youth that have not traditionally taken part in the 4-H program.

Workshops at the forum featured information on character building, horse safety, the Japanese Exchange program, and putting 4-H club information on the World Wide Web.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Now I am sitting in a quiet house but last week was quite different. At one time we had 10 people eating and sleeping in our house.

The families were from Georgia, and when we awoke on a Sunday morning to two inches of snow, they were elated. Snowballs flew in every direction. When I opened an outside door, I almost got one in my face.

A large ash tree was cut down while they were here and the children helped to pick up small branches from a field. One grandchild even helped to remove stones from a farm field. However, electronic games also occupied their time.

One day during the busy week, I accompanied a younger member of the family to the hospital for some tests. I had hours to watch other people. Usually, young people brought their aged parents, but my case was the opposite. I have had too much hospital experience lately.

To change the atmosphere, we drove to Longwood Gardens in Kennett Square, the next day. In 1700 George Peirce purchased 402 acres of land from William Penn. Later duPont bought the land to save the wide variety of trees that were planted there. We saw one large tree that was brought in by helicopter to replace a dead one. Today it encompasses more than 1,000 acres of gardens, woodlands, and meadows.

The beauty of the plants in the four acres of greenhouses is beyond describing. I've always enjoyed the room of exotic orchids as every color of the rainbow. About 50 years ago, I traveled to Longwood Gardens to see the spectacular illuminated fountains in conjunction with a musical program. That night was one to remember always.

Out Of The Attic

HALIFAX (Dauphin Co.) - Quilts, antiques, and attic treasures along with new trends in manufactured foods will be featured topics at Dauphin County Cooperative Extension Awareness Day 2000. "Out of the Attic" is this year's theme for the all-day event to be held on Tuesday, June 6 from 9 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. at Camp Hebron, Halifax.

Stephanie DeMuro of Quilters Gathering will open the day with "Looking Back at Quilts" as she discusses these works of art with their rich history and popular resurgence.

The day continues with "Who Gets Mama's Yellow Plate?" - a question families often have to answer. Pat Lagerman, Northumberland County Extension Agent, will reveal how to determine what is fair for your family, plus present a look at new options and consequences when distributing personal items.

Do you have treasures in your attic just gathering dust? Carol Ulsh, proprietor of Tressler House in New Bloomfield, will dazzle you with ideas on how to put them to everyday use and display them with pizzazz. As an added bonus, members of Dauphin County Garden Clubs will decorate tables with themes surrounding old fashion nursery rhymes.

Are you confused about the fat replacers Olestra and Salatrim? Are they beneficial and do they really reduce calories and fat intake?

Join Marg Malehock, Cumberland County family living agent, to taste test samples and learn more about this new trend in manufactured foods.

Cost for the day, which includes luncheon and door prizes is $15 per person. Registration deadline is May 26.

Additional information and reservation forms are available by calling Dauphin County Cooperative Extension office at (717) 921-8803 or 1-800-328-0058 during regular business hours from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

A crowd gathers around the sheep shearing demonstration at last year's celebration.

Celebrate Farm & City Day At Museum

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Watch a chick hatch, a sheep being sheared, and a planetarium show — all in the same day.

This unusual combination of activities is planned to help people who live in the cities and on the farm understand each other's lifestyles.

Called Farm and City Day, the special celebration is scheduled for May 13, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The location is the North Museum, 400 College Ave., Lancaster.

An outside tent will be set up on the museum grounds to house a farmyard petting zoo and farm equipment display. Some tent activities and exhibits include incubating and hatching chicken eggs, sheep shearing, understanding water tables, corn shucking, and even a photo opportunity with ponies. Plenty of food such as ice cream and chicken barbecue will be available.

Inside the museum, another world awaits. At 10:30 a.m. you can find out about rainbows and conditions that form them. Visit the dinosaurs, stop by the science cart, or take up the challenge of a museum scavenger hunt. Three planetarium shows, considered the most advanced and the third largest in the state, will be shown in the afternoon.

Tent and outside activities are free for the entire family. Regular admission will be charged for the museum and planetarium.

For more information, call the museum at (717) 291-3941.

For some children, this is the only chance they get to touch farm animals.

Why are some lilies extra tall?

The pretty, white flowers sold around Easter time are supposed to be short, stocky and dark green. But sometimes the lilies have to compete with others for light — and they stretch out in the process.

Commercial flower growers raise lilies and other potted plants on benches that are about waist high in greenhouses. To grow as many flowers as possible — and yield the most profits — growers put as many pots on a bench as they can.

That's where the problem starts. But to completely understand what happens, you first need some background on light. The sun's visible light spectrum — which you can see — ranges from red to violet. Plants also use the sun's far-red and ultraviolet light, which you can't see.

Plants use sunlight to make energy through a process called photosynthesis. (Say photo-SIN-thi-sis.) On a crowded greenhouse bench, leaves on the bottom half of the lily plants can't get enough visible light for photosynthesis because the top leaves block it all. Without the visible light, the far-red light can reach the plants' leaves. For some as-of-yet-undiscovered reason, the far-red light triggers a switch in the plant to grow tall and spindly.

Growers try to control these reactions with chemicals. But floriculturists at Ohio State University and Clemson University are working on ways to filter out the far-red light at the roof of the greenhouse. The results work — and it's a lot less work for the growers, and a lot better for the environment!

Handcrafted Truck To Go To Highest Bidder

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The glistening red cab Peterbuilt with its long white trailer is every trucker's dream.

The fully-loaded truck can be purchased for an undetermined price at Manheim Christian Day School's 24th annual benefit auction, April 29.

J. Earl Horst, who constructed the truck to look like one of three he had owned for his farm truck hauling business, painted the wood so that it appears to be metal rather than wood. Fashioned from oak and cherry woods, the truck includes such details as air horns, steering wheel, air brakes, lights, and other items that were painstakingly painted to imitate the real thing.

The retired New Holland farmer said that he always wanted to dabble in woodworking, but didn't have time until he retired. This is the 18th truck he has built without a pattern since 1990.

"I try to make each one better than the last," Horst said.

Horst gives all his trucks away. Actually he donates them as fundraisers for causes that he believes in. This particular truck will benefit the school where three of his grandchildren attend.

He said, "I really believe in Christian education. This is a way I can help the school."

The truck is only one of hundreds of items made by grandparents, parents, children, and other supporters of Christian education. Quilts, furniture reproductions, and toys are some of the other items that were handmade.

Also to be sold over the auction block are antiques, furniture, dishes, John Deere pedal tractor with wagon and other tractor memorabilia, general merchandise, gift certificates, lawn and garden supplies, shrubbery and plants, Winross trucks, Nascar, and action collectibles.

The auction is well-known for its superb workmanship in quilts. This year's offerings include the following designs: "Rose of Sharon," "Promise You A Rose Garden," "Log Cabin Boston," "Bargello," "Biblical Blocks," "Miniature Country," "Butterfly," "Lancaster Treasure," "Heart of Roses," "Woven Hearts," "Mariner's Compass," "Postage Stamp," "Midnight Sky," "Color Splash," "Mariner's Compass," "Heart's Bouquet," and "Dresden Plate."

A collection of original, limited, and open edition prints include "Winter Quarters," "Knox Bridge," and "Evening in S. Michael," by Richard Bollinger. Also included are "House of Prayer" and "The Country Store" by P. Buckley Moss, "Ricket's Glen," "Solitude," "Challenger" and "Tracks of the Past," by Dan Christ. "The General Sutter Inn," by Debra Smith. Others include "Garden Gate," by Diane Stewart, and "Byerland Mennonite Church," by Jean Ginder.

Additional prints and originals will also be sold from artists such as Walter Patschorke, Marc Hanson, Dan Barthod, Peter Snyder, Erma Wenger, Myrtle Trembly, Freiman Stoltzfus, Arlene Fisher, and Deborah Watson.

The two-day auction begins with a chicken barbecue dinner, Friday April 28, from 3 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Bidding will begin at 6 p.m.

A country breakfast will be served Saturday, April 29, from 7 a.m. to 10 a.m. The auction begins under the main tent at 9 a.m. A secondary auction for lawn and garden supplies and general items will begin at noon and conducted simultaneously during the main auction.

A large variety of food and children's activities will be available throughout the two-day auction.

Manheim Christian Day School is located one mile north of Manheim Square along Rt. 72. Look for the big tents.

Susquehanna County

The Green Grove Community 4-H Club met Saturday, April 8, for its annual reorganizational meeting. The meeting was held in the 4-H room in the basement of Rev. and Mrs. Sherman's home.

The meeting was attended by 16 members. Leaders, parents, and visitors brought the total attendance to 31. After the invocation and pledges, Rev. Sherman introduced the various leaders and projects offered this year. After other introductions, Andrew Myers, Camping and Hiking Leader, led the club in the song, "America."

Following this, 4-H member Mark Musser explained what a 4-H project is, and organizational leader John Sherman gave an overview of the club's plans for the summer. Various members shared their last year's 4-H experiences with the other members.

After each project leader gave an overview of their project, club members and guests enjoyed refreshments provided by Luann Ransom. Then Fernanda Rodriguez received the door prize. The club then collected donations.

New officers were also elected during the meeting. They are as follows: Mark Musser, president; Mike Musser, vice president; Nathaniel Leach, treasurer; and Michael Freund, secretary.

Following the elections, the members visited the various project displays, and the project leaders answered questions. The next meeting will be held on Saturday, April 22, at 9:30 a.m.

Capital Days

4-H'ers from across the state will participate in the Pennsylvania 4-H Capital Days, an annual citizenship awareness event, held May 1 and 2 at the Hilton and Towers in Harrisburg.

The two-day program shows 4-H'ers how state government works and helps them understand their responsibilities as citizens. Through an application process that includes such criteria as interviews and essays, 120 boys and girls were selected to attend.

On Monday, May 1, the students will visit 11 state agencies including the departments of agriculture, transportation, education, and commerce. Following their visits, they will take part in a simulation workshop in which they write grant proposals up to $100,000 and create a budget related to one of the agencies. The students then will present their proposals to a three-person panel.

At a Monday evening banquet, Pat Wolff, senior director of the American Farm Bureau Federation, will speak to the group about advocacy efforts.

On Tuesday, the 4-H'ers will join 85 legislators at a legislative breakfast. They will be addressed by Marilyn Corbin, Penn State Cooperative Extension's state program leader for children, youth, and families. Following the breakfast, students will tour the capitol and meet with legislators representing their home counties.

York Co. Goat

The Kiddin' Around Goat Club installed new officers at the January meeting. They are as follows: Sarah Deardorff, president; Brandon Parsons, vice president; Chris Parsons, treasurer; Mary Zeigler, secretary; Sean Mulrooney, reporter, and Liam Mulrooney, historian.

In February, the club toured a large goat farm. At the March meeting, members discussed the doe chain, and they received their doe chain applications.

In April, the club met at the 4-H center barn to learn showmanship skills and to learn about banding and disbudding. Members discussed plans for future meetings and revised plans for the club picnic.

Cumberland County

The Cumberland County 4-H Dairy Club meeting was held on April 10. President Thomas Harwood called the meeting to order, and roll call was taken by members saying the name of their animal.

In his County Council report, Zach Travis reminded members about the spring hoagie sale and wheat weighing. Jason Nailor gave a report on the PCC Teen Business Seminar. Those who attended were Jason Nailor, Mark Fulton, and Thomas Harwood. Amy Kaucher gave a report on the officers training, while Donald Harwood provided an update on the dairy judging team.

The dairy judging team recently attended the spring judging contest at Penn State. The senior division team included Sarah Day, Amy Kulick, Scott Walton, and Aaron Corman. The team placed fourth, with Sarah Day placing fourth as an individual. Amy Kaucher participated in the intermediate division, while Melissa Detman competed in the junior division contest. She placed sixth.

Kathy Walton reported that insurance for the club needed to be paid, while Thomas Harwood reviewed the new calendar to make sure everything was correct.

Following the meeting Thomas Harwood gave a demonstration, and the club discussed its float for the parade. Members reviewed what items were needed and requested volunteers to help. The next meeting will be held on May 8 at the Stover Farm in Carlisle.

Somerset County Grapples With Water Issues

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co.

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) – Issues on water quality, quantity and rights raised lots of questions in Somerset County, April 4. What can we do with water? What can't we do with it?

First and foremost, any use of water must be reasonable and not spiteful. The rule is fairness.

"Do to others as you would have them do to you," will keep peace in the neighborhood when it comes to water – and thought of other issues.

Who thought of that idea?

God did.

Moreover, He owns the water and in different seasons, sends the showers to replenish water supplies.

When the Somerset County Farm Bureau held a water issues meeting for the public, about 80 persons filled the meeting room, in the headquarters of the Somerset Rural Electric Cooperative.

Obviously, they have a justifiable concern about the quantity and quality of and rights to use water in Somerset County.

"We thought there was a need for something like this because of the demand on the water we have," said Kurt Walker, Farm Bureau vice-president and meeting coordinator.

It seemed the ingathering of information from four speakers, sequentially lead to more questions demanding answers. Persons were promised responses later, if their concerns were written on index cards that were collected.

The speakers included two geologists, Jim Casselberry of Casselberry Associates, Boalsburg, and Dave Bomba of Johnstown; Dave Plank, Department of Environmental Protection, Pittsburgh, and Samuel Clapper, a Somerset attorney.

Clapper noted there are three kinds of water: surface water, subterranean (underground) water and percolating waters.

He said the general rule is, if the stream is passing through your property and you are using it for domestic and agricultural use, you are without liability to the person downstream who runs out of water.

"You are not allowed to use water off the land to the detriment of somebody downstream," Clapper reported.

This would include commercial uses of water such as selling bottled water.

In cases of damming up water, you are liable if it backs up and causes damage for your neighbor. Damming, however, is permissible if done for livestock, the attorney said.

If the waters are navigable waters, you cannot deplete it. Navigable waters are strongly regulated, Clapper said.

In cases of the water being polluted, the person responsible for the contamination is liable if there is a way to prove him culpable. But proof there must be, whether the scenario involves a municipality, individual or private user.

The improper use of water must be proved with data and testimony against the alleged misuser. If someone else's drilling took your water, evidence to prove it must be provided.

"Municipalities can condemn water rights but they must provide just compensation," Clapper said. "Once a municipality has the correct permit from the state, the same rules do not apply." He added, "The municipal entity does have the power of eminent domain."

This knowledge drew a mixed murmuring from the group, which was comprised of interested individuals such as farmers, municipal officials, and representatives of local government.

Regarding contamination of water, Dave Plank from the DEP cautioned farmers to use restraint when enriching the soil. "Don't over-fertilize," he said.

In some cases, Plank reported there are farmers who eschew interference and advice about using the water.

"They don't want anyone telling them how to use the water on their land," Plank said, noting a nitrate problem in Lancaster County to illustrate his point.

Geologist Casselberry said the quality of water is determined by precipitation acting with the rock strata. The more alkaline, the higher the water quality. The more acid, the poorer the water quality.

"Poor water quality is made worse by mining," he said.

To wit, in recent years the relationship of water quality to lingering effects from decades of coal mining, has become a pertinent topic in Somerset County. The solutions do not come easily or quickly.

Casselberry talked about bedrock aquifers and fractures, explaining how fractures control the ability of water to flow. Wells should be placed near the highest degree of fracturing, according to Casselberry.

When a geologist is engaged to evaluate a well or a water situation, the job can go quicker if the well owner already has recorded facts about the well itself and the water.

"There is no substitute for documentation," he said. "Help yourself by writing everything down on paper. Don't try to keep information in your head."

Such information, for instance, should include an inventory of everything within a half mile, information about the aquifer, the well casing, and water depth during and following pumping.

About 80 persons listened to experts explain rights and talk about water issues at a meeting sponsored by the Somerset County Farm Bureau.

Geologist Dave Bomba looks at and reviews permits in southwest Pennsylvania. He is responsible for the site survey, a pre-drilling plan, 48-hour aquifer test and a report submitted to the DEP.

During the site survey, for instance, Bomba would note how the surrounding land is being used and the possibility for contamination from those sources. He would learn about other private water supplies in the area.

One couple at the meeting was eager for information, because it has been reported an existing restaurant is planning to drill a new well near the water source for their farming operation, located along Laurel Run Road.

"We want to say 'No,' before the permit process," said Robert and Janet Miller, adamantly. "We don't want it to get to the permit process."

The Millers' 100 head of milking cows and replacement animals drink about 8,000 gallons of water a day when it's hot, but that figure doesn't take into account cleaning and sanitizing the equipment and household use.

Since 1942 the well has not failed; nevertheless, possibility has them worried.

Bomba said nobody had yet contacted him for a permit about the proposed well.

Geologist Dave Bomba uses a marker to illustrate a point when answering a question during a water issues meeting in Somerset County.

Schmidt Earns Junior Bronze and Silver

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. – Jessica Schmidt, Drumore, Pa., has qualified for the bronze and silver awards of the National Junior Angus Association, according to James Fisher, director of junior activities for the American Angus Association.

Schmidt is the 17-year-old daughter of Pete and Laurie Schmidt and a senior at Solanco High School.

Grow Value-Added Food Products?

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Economic forces, federal farm policies, and consumer choices are causing small farmers to look at the business of farming in new ways. Today's successful farmers are, of necessity, increasingly becoming small business entrepreneurs.

Many small farm experts and policy makers across the nation believe that local value-added agricultural food production—where farmers assume more processing steps and sell through direct marketing techniques—is a critical strategy to sustain many small farmers and their communities.

The world's agricultural trade is rapidly shifting from commodities to products. Consumers are demanding products with traits to meet their specific needs. Global competition is intense.

To survive in today's dynamic market, small farmers must interpret market signals accurately. They must carefully consider what mix of crops and other agricultural products will maintain crop diversity and flexibility, and provide more value-added farm income.

Value-added defined. Value-added means adding features—desirable to customers—to a raw agricultural, marine, aquacultural, or forestry material used to make a product. Drying, canning, juicing, combining ingredients, handcrafting, and unique packaging and marketing techniques can add value.

Everyone who adds value to a product as it goes from farm to consumer gets paid. Vertical integration—the farmer doing production, processing, and distributing—can be good for those farmers who are willing and able.

Many farmers have not gone into value-added food products because they are concentrating on what they have traditionally done best—producing a commodity. Doing more of the processing and marketing activities involved in the marketing chain takes time, skill, and extra labor.

Value-added examples include:

- Producing a tomato herb barbecue sauce may earn more profit for a producer than selling tomatoes and herbs separately.

- 23 rancher members of the Rocky Mountain Beef Cooperative in Colorado do a growing business by producing USDA certified all-natural beef for discerning customers, high-end restaurants, and health food supermarkets.

QUESTION — A Schuylkill County reader wants to know where to find instructions on making baskets from birch bark.

QUESTION — Peg Koser, Lancaster, wants to know where to find the book "Aunt Nan and the Miller Five," by Esther Eby Glass.

QUESTION — E. Rantonizy, Glassport, wants to know how to eliminate wild chrysanthemums from gardens and lawns.

QUESTION — Ralph Nissley wants to know where to get an Uncle Wiggly game.

ANSWER — Cheryl Mengel, New Tripoli, wanted information on replacing old china pieces. Several answers were printed previously, but here is a new one: Ken Kipp or Gloria Munsell, P.O. Box 116, Allenwood, PA 17810.

ANSWER — For the Mount Joy reader who wanted information on an 1857 silver penny, a Christiana reader suggests checking your local library for the red book, "A Guide Book of United States Coins." A blue book used for dealers' prices is called "Handbook of U.S. Coins." Both books are written by R.S. Yeoman.

Another source is Dr. Robert Hiatt, Maple City Coin, P.O. Box 47, Monmouth, IL 61462 or phone (309) 734-3212.

Carrol Boyer, Stewartstown, writes the 1857 penny has a varied history that includes two different sizes and two different faces. The Coronet face coin is a composition of about 80 percent copper and 20 percent nickle, and is 29 millimeters in diameter. The design was by J.P. Longacre or an apprentice, which is determined by the shape of the "5." This is known as the large penny.

The Flying Eagle, or small penny, was also issued that year and is 88 percent copper and 12 percent nickle and is 19 millimeters in diameter. This coin was also designed by J.P. Longacre.

The problem with these pennies are many. As far as a price identification goes, there are over strikes, double strikes, altered dates, and forgeries. Boyer said at least eight different varieties have been identified with large dates, small dates, large letters, small letters, or a combination of all these characteristics.

The price range is staggering, starting at $6 and topping at $3,000 for mint coins. In no case is there any record of a silver penny recorded. You can have the coin appraised by any honest coin dealer.

ANSWER — Abner Stoltzfus from Quarryville wanted 10 ceiling fans with three blades that have long round belts from one fan to the next. Levi Beiler, 83 S. Belmont Rd., Paradise, writes that he has five ceiling fans manufactured by Lapp's Barn Equipment in good condition that he will sell.

ANSWER — Cooki Hare, 3354 Glenville Rd., Glenville, PA 17329, writes in regards to Joni Michaels request for period clothing patterns. Cooki has 1940-1962 patterns for ladies, teenagers, and dolls. The patterns are from Advance, Butterick, Simplicity, and Vogue.

ELIMINATE WASTE IN YOUR FEED BUNKS!

When utilizing less-than-perfect feeds stuffs, conventional feed wagons allow your cattle to pick and choose what they like, leaving undesirable feed in your bunks. A Vertical TMR Cutter/Mixer/Feeder from New Direction Equipment will cut your bales of hay or silage into a True Total Mixed Ration, FRESH each day, providing a fluffy, easily digestible ration. It eliminates the waste and also eliminates the need for a tub grinder!

BLOW OUT PRICING From Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc. ON TWO NEW GEHL SCAVENGER SPREADERS (with New Design Hyd. Auger) Pick Your Size!

Why is Scavenger the Best?

One big reason is the unique new round-core auger. This auger features segmented paddles grouped in a spiral pattern. This fighting configuration delivers more material to the discharge expeller in less time for faster unloading. The paddles are precisely positioned to deliver more uniform feeding to the discharge expeller. This exceptional design breaks up and blends all types of manure.

The auger is hydraulically powered both up and down (unlike competitive units that use springs, gravity or fixed augers). This design provides more control to chop through bridged material or power down through heavy loads.

Outstanding Application Control.

Gehl's proven Variflo™ discharge system has been made even better. It's 33 percent wider on the Model 1315. On all new models the expeller assembly has been significantly strengthened. New square-tooth expeller paddles spread smoothly and evenly. You choose the rate you want, from heavy spring-time spreading to light top-dressing. With Scavenger you have complete control right at your fingertips.

NEW Heavy Duty Design

Heavy-duty round-core segmented auger breaks up and blends manure with less chance of wrapping. The specially-formed auger paddles are set at the precise pitch to maintain proper material flow to the discharge expeller.

ALUMINUM PORTABLE ELEVATORS

(Not recommended for permanent installations - unless ordered with 1/4" poly-wear liner for longer pan life.)

EXCLUSIVE Boot Guard with Agitator

- Heavy-service, belt-type guard attached to sturdy hinge on boot
- Guard rests on flights - movement of flights provides agitating action - keeps material or silage out of boot and moving up the elevator

Includes incline hopper, motor mount, and required belts. Set Up and Ready to Go - Just mount motor (not included) and install shields. Optional polywear liner protects pan - super-slick, self-lubricating liner prevents freezdown...reduces chain stretching...increases chain and pan life, cuts noise levels and lowers energy consumption by up to 30%.

- Easy to handle - sturdily built
- Light weight - rust resistant - never needs painting
- Enclosed bottom trough for clean chain return and extra strength
- Take-up for chain at idler shaft - easily tightened without affecting drive adjustments
- Dropout hole with gate - helps prevent returning cobs and husks from jamming in boot end of elevator. Allows returning cobs and husks to fall out before reaching boot. Gate can be quickly closed when materials other than cob corn are being conveyed
- Flow-contour corded rubber flights designed for maximum efficiency, minimum ride-up

New Heavy Duty 300 Bushel Knight Box Spreaders IN STOCK at BINKLEY & HURST BROS. INC.

BLOW OUT PRICING PROGRAM ON NEW KNIGHT 300 BUSHEL SPREADERS IN STOCK! SINGLE AXLE & TANDEM MODELS IN STOCK FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

An all-new spreader designed and built in the Knight tradition of heavy-duty, rugged, long-lasting products with features to carry you into the 21st century.
Single Axle and Tandem Axle Models

Heavy Duty Variable Speed Drive System

A variable speed, hydraulic apron drive with tractor-mounted speed control valve allows easy adjustment of the apron speed for different materials and for load clean-out

This cut-away view shows the lower side and frame overlap ① which is specially engineered to provide added strength and double protection against rust through. The inverted U-channel cross members ② provide double the floor support area for superior strength. The inverted design reduces corrosion by eliminating trapped material

The ultra-high molecular weight, solid poly floor reduces friction and winter freeze down and provides more strength and durability than individual tongue and groove boards or plywood coated with plastic. This 3/4" thick, two-piece UHMW poly floor is a first of its kind and is designed to allow for expansion and contraction

on side rust through and on poly floors.

Low Profile For Easy Loading
The paddle placement on the specially designed, 26" diameter rooster-comb beater provides a more consistent, wide spread pattern with better break-up of material. The 5/16" thick, one-piece paddles are pre-punched for bolt-on replacement teeth

The apron gearbox is a hollow bore "split" design, making service and removal of the apron shaft an easy task. An overload relief valve is mounted directly to the hydraulic drive motor to help protect the apron drive

The greaseable, 2-jaw, over running clutch allows for easy PTO hook up and prevents beater backlash force when the PTO is disengaged. The transfer shaft is piloted into the rear clutch jaw to maintain continuous alignment

We Are Ready To Deliver A Quality New Box Spreader!

BINKLEY & HURST BROS. INC. Has A Heavy Duty

One day in 1949, a friend told Stan Knight, "I wish someone would make a spreader that would not break down with frozen manure." That challenge to the founder of Knight Manufacturing led to the Knight heavy duty manure spreaders that were soon on the market. The common focus of Knight spreaders to this day is that they are simple and rugged and designed to give many years of service.

Binkley & Hurst Bros. Has One In Stock For You!

The End-Gate is one of the key factors in making the Scott™ body unique. Forged steel hinges give maximum strength, insuring proper and lasting fit. Hinges permit end-gate wings to fold back along body. This full opening design, with removable header bar, allows loading of bags and pallets to the full inside width of box.

A small center grain trap in the center gate allows metered flow. The center gate swings open for full flow into a pit, also allowing for easy cleaning of box corners.

Gehl's family of five disc mower conditioners will give you the cutting edge when it comes to simplicity and performance. Choose from two conventional machines or three big swing frame models offering cutting widths that range from just over 9 feet, all the way to the new 18 foot giant - the biggest in the industry!

All Gehl disc mower conditioners deliver fast, smooth cutting performance. Hay is thoroughly conditioned for fast drying, thanks to wide, machined conditioning rolls. And Gehl's simple drive system uses fewer components - that means greater reliability.

Visit your Gehl dealer soon for details on how to make your best hay the Gehl way.

Lock into saving time and money with Doubt-loc sweeps

SOIL-
SOLUTION

Heavy-duty, hardened-steel adapter provides rugged, square-to-ground sweep mounting

Narrow-stem design provides excellent soil and residue flow

Unique crown and straight-wing design wears evenly for longer life and consistent cutting action, plus provides excellent scouring and penetration

Beveled bottom edge sharpens itself as the sweep travels through the soil

High-strength, heat-treated steel extends wear life

Reinforced point increases wear life

Why buy? Because they...

- are easier to install than typical bolt-on sweeps, and that saves you more time.
- have superior sweep retention which reduces routine maintenance and sweep and hardware replacement costs
- feature the proven Tru-Width sweep advantages.

They're unique! Because the...

- heavy-duty, hardened-steel adapter and narrow stem ensure a superior fit.
- precision-made adapter and sweep ensure rugged, square-to-ground sweep mounting for excellent sweep retention, and that reduces replacement costs. And draft load is minimized to reduce fuel consumption.

Equipment Includes Option For Specialty, Small Grains

RACINE, Wis. — Farmers now have a new harvest option specially designed to meet the heavy challenges of canola, grass seed, barley, mint, and other specialty and hay crops.

The Case IH 325 Multi-Crop Special windrower header is the newest addition to the Case IH 25 Series header family. Available in 15- and 18-foot widths, the header is compatible with the Case IH 8860, 8860HP and 8870 self-propelled (SP) windrowers.

"In combination with 8800 Series SP windrowers, the 325 header provides farmers with the durability; and versatility needed for harvesting specialty crops," said Bill Weber, Case IH marketing manager. "Its innovative, industry-leading features will help farmers reduce costs and ensure higher levels of productivity and reliability."

Leaving crops in the field means lost profits. Thanks to the 8800 Series windrower hydraulic header-tilt feature (optional on 8860 model), the 325 header can quickly adjust to any downed crop, pick it up, and cut it cleanly.

In addition, the operator has a clear view of the cutterbar during the operation, even though the 325 offers the most vertical discharge clearance in the industry. This means excellent crop flow, even in high-volume, fluffy crops. Most crop condition adjustments can be performed from the cab, helping increase productivity.

Like its 25 Series header counterpart — the 425 shiftable draper header — the 325 header features a tough pickup reel and the same durable dual sickle swaybar knife drive system. Its knife drives are designed for cutting tough green forage and small grains.

The reel is built for power and durability, featuring heavy-duty reel bats, hardware and a hydraulic reel drive. The drive features a slender profile design, and provides more power to the reel through a chain reduction system.

The 325 header also offers an advanced twin auger. It uses a hydraulic motor to power each of four stub augers. To eliminate the chance of the motor shaft wrapping with crop, each motor is enclosed in the auger support tube. And to eliminate the chance of the twin auger motor shafts wrapping with crop, the design used four hydraulic motors enclosed in the auger support tubes.

This unique hydraulic design provides quieter operation and reduces vibration. It also eliminates a number of parts, simplifying service and reducing the chance of breakdowns.

Removable belly pans under the augers give operators the versatility to adjust for conditions. In rocky conditions or heavy crops, the belly pans can be removed to protect the header from damage. In light crops like hay, the belly pans can be used to prevent crop loss. A removable conditioning kit with steel-on-steel intermeshing rolls is available for growers interested in harvesting hay with the 325 header.

To further improve performance, farmers can choose heavy-duty gauge wheels as a field-installed option.

WE'VE ALWAYS BEEN GOOD.

REALLY GOOD

given Mueller* in it comes to dairy production, our customers demand quality in their cooling and storage vessels. They know Mueller has always been the company to set this standard worldwide.

Dependable and durable, our milk coolers will provide you with years of trouble-free performance as well as low operating cost, precise temperature control and a wide range of standard features.

"BETTER"

to the employees and engineers at Mueller, means constantly improving our already great products. We have added convenience to our tank washer system by attaching the motor to the side of each milk cooler smaller than 3,000 gallons. At the same time, we have added quality by installing the most effective interior washing device in the industry. Mueller's tank washing spray dish is an innovative, one-of-a-kind design which more evenly distributes the cleaning solution throughout the tank's interior. It prevents clogging and offers maintenance-free cleaning. This high-performance process will give you extra clean tanks.

Club Lamb Sale II

SATURDAY, 7:00 PM,
APRIL 29, 2000

Green Co. Fairgrounds, Waynesburg, PA

We have put together an outstanding set of club lambs for you to choose from that'll be competitive in any arena. These lambs will be sired by "Black Velvet", our Kerr ram from the '96 Corp that has been working so well for us and our new exciting ram "Bad Hamit". "Bad Habit" is sired by Commanche from Barbara Garvie out of the Stitzlein/Rader flocks. As in previous years, there will be lambs to fit most anyone's price range.

Our lambs have always fared well at the Pennsylvania Farm Show such as Luke Svonavec's Res. Svonvec at the Eastern Grand Champion in 1998.

Attention Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers!

New Products Now Available...

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP

This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40

An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorptions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program

As manufacturers and distributors of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

Want Good Alfalfa? Watch The Soil pH

You won't often see a scene such as this. Joe Weimer holds a plant showing deep root growth—the alfalfa was finally able to locate some moisture during the 1999 drought. By coincidence, a cave-in found near a county road revealed a natural underground water course next to Joe Weimer's alfalfa crop. Photo by Gay Brownlee

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — When it comes to his alfalfa, crop farmer Joe Weimer of Somerset said nothing is more critical than maintaining a pH balance of 6.5 to 7.

"The main thing is to keep an eye on the pH," Weimer said.

Weimer usually sends a test to Penn State or to the University of Virginia. On old plantings, he runs a soil sample about every third or fourth year. However, with new seedings, it is critical to run a soil sample right away. In two or three weeks the results will come back.

If the indicators show the soil pH is low lime it.

"Usually, good alfalfa would take 1,000 pounds to a ton a year,"

Weimer said. "I have a lime spreader, so I spread it myself."

Weimer prefers using hydrated lime because it goes to work the same season, which is pretty fast. Weimer said the lime application will last 4 to 5 years.

"I like to get six to seven years out of seed," Weimer said. "When the alfalfa comes out, I go into two years of corn before I go back into alfalfa."

The rotation works out well and allows some 12 to 20 acres of new alfalfa seedings to go in every year.

The fundamental thing about alfalfa is to avoid wet spots, cautioned Weimer. Right now, his own acreage has one vulnerable area where a wet spot is troublesome.

Producers Use CLA, Mini-Dairies To Move Milk

ANDY ANDREWS

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Milk is the original "nutraceutical" or nutrient-pharmaceutical that can protect the human body, science has proven.

Simply put, milk harbors conjugated linoleic acid (CLA), a fatty acid present in milk that can fight certain types of cancer. Milk contains about 4-6 milligrams of CLA per gram of fat (cheese, too).

And pasture scientists are showing that cows fed high amounts of forages, including those from pasture, can increase CLA in milk by 2-3 percent, noted Larry Muller, Penn State dairy scientist, at last month's Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

Muller spoke on a session focusing on value-added dairy markets.

These days, dairy farmers are struggling with volatile prices, increased input costs, decreasing margins, and they receive a smaller percentage of the retail price. Beverage consumption, particularly soft drinks, is on the rise.

More than ever, farmers must consider the end users of the products. And those end users — consumers — are looking for the "pharma" foods that can add to a healthy lifestyle.

CLAs are found in unsaturated fat. Already dairy science (through a Penn State pilot project) has found that, through management of nutrients to the cow, the proportion of the saturated, or bad fat, can be decreased, and unsaturated fat increased.

In the future, CLA amounts could potentially be more carefully controlled. The same CLAs have

I have recently been involved with helping to conduct several grazing schools in the Harrisburg area. As I was conducting some classroom discussions on several agronomic topics, it became evident to me that even though several of the subjects were designed for beginning grazers, they were points that many experienced graziers may need to revisit. I will address several of those topics in this column.

When dealing with agronomic principles of grazing, we need to think about the basic unit of production — the tiller or individual plant. When we have a population of tillers, they are called a sward. It is the number and size of tillers in a sward that makes up the total yield of dry matter, either as hay, silage, or pasture. We need to make sure that we care for these fillers by providing a proper growing environment with all the essential nutrients such as nitrogen, phosphorous, and potassium, in a soil with the optimum pH level. We also need to provide the tiller with proper management and that basically in-been also found to inhibit cancer in animals, reduce the risk of atherosclerosis, and help to control diabetes.

Already CLA is sold in tablet form in health food stores. Muller displayed a bottle of a CLA supplement, in softgel form, marketed by GNC for about $27 per bottle, or about 50 cents per day.

Muller noted that individual, niche markets have been opening for organic milk. He showed examples of the Horizon Organic brand. Organic milk accounts for one percent of the $10.4 billion U.S. milk market, accounting for about $115 million in sales. He also showed a brand of Silk Vanilla soy milk. Altogether, soy milk sales reached $206 million in 1999 and are projected to reach $295 million in 2003.

Pennsylvania was once home to more than 300 milk juggling operations, though some companies are striving to increase speciality packaging of milk, ice cream, and cheese.

Robert E. Turner, national sales manager of the Pladot Mini Dairy milk processing system, spoke at the conference.

Turner has been attempting to teach "out of the box" thinking, he said, regarding bringing milk products to market.

The company said it will see 15-20 new systems this year in the U.S., said Turner, who operates out of Hagerstown, Md.

Using his system, Turner claims those who bring their own products to market can achieve a $15-16 per hundredweight or more price of milk.

He has seen some best yogurt with the system, besides a chocolate roll filled with cheese in the inside.

The Pladot turnkey system is already in use on the York County farm of H.E. Heindel and Sons. Brouge. The dairy includes 200 cows with mostly Holstein and approximately 25 Brown Swiss.

Turner said the Pladot system is present in 26 countries in the world and "just came to the U.S. last year." They install the entire system.

Though Pennsylvania has the most stringent food health rules in the world, PDA allows some changes in labeling for made-on-the-farm products. The average return on the product for plants is 25.5 months, but 70 percent of the products are selling every day.

Increase Pasture Yields and lots more!

Original "Spreading Action"® tines give better coverage at much higher speeds. Adjusts without tools to provide the right penetration for a big variety of jobs!

PASTURES: Increases quality and quantity of feed from pastures. Aerates to stimulate growth and improve moisture penetration. Scatters droppings, reducing parasites. Prepares soil for overseeding without disturbing existing growth. Works in seed and fertilizer. Many owners report pasture yield increases of 15%.

HERBICIDE INCORPORATION: Independent research using black light photography proves the Fuerst Harrow behind your disk or cultivator gives you "near perfect" incorporation in one pass - better than implements costing several times more! Shreds trash as it prepares & levels seedbeds.

BROADCASTING SMALL GRAINS AND GRASSES: University of Illinois found overseeding by broadcasting followed by a Fuerst Harrow a superior combination, out-performing equipment costing more than 10 times as much. Pulled behind the broadcaster, it covers seed to desired depth in one time-saving operation.

SHREDS STALKS: Shreds and spreads stalks in spring ahead of no-till and ridge-till planting.

4 to 42 ft widths. Flexes to cover every inch at 6-8 mph. No maintenance. Easy to use and store. Insist on the original "Spreading Action"® tines.

LUCK//NOW Mixer Feeders

The Line of LUCK//NOW Mixer Feeders Just Got Bigger and Better

Since 1979 LUCK//NOW Mixer Feeders have been recognized as one of the most dependable and strongest built mixers in the field.

Reliable "C & S" Chain and Socket models from 200 cu. ft. to 375 cu. ft. are the foundation for the well earned reputation.

To enhance its existing line of Mixer Feeders, LUCK//NOW introduced the "P" Series of Mixer Feeders with six models ranging in size from the Model 300 with a mixing capacity of 310 cubic ft., to the Model 750 with a mixing capacity of 900 cubic ft.

The large diameter augers in all the "P" Series Mixer Feeders are capable of giving the mix required, from rations with well cured, long stemmed legume-type hay, to mixes with green grass, and mixes with silage and commodities. Better milk production, better weight gains and greatly improved animal health are just some of the results of a finely-tuned feed ration.

Standard Features

- Four auger mixing system;
- Large diameter augers with 5/8" and 3/8" thick flighting;
- Large diameter heavy wall auger tubes for extra strength to do the tough mixing jobs
- Bottom shear angle for the harder-to-mix rations;
- Heavy Duty SFCW flanged block bearings on the drive end of all augers, equipped with special seals and covers, provide for years of trouble-free operation;
- External grease banks;
- Rear oil bath drive compartment lets all chains and sprockets run in oil;
- Planetary gear reduction to add simplicity and reduce input H.P. requirements;
- All sprockets on the main drive system equipped with S-taper hubs for ease of maintenance;
- Rear bumper for added protection against damage;
- All Mixer Feeders come complete with either of several makes of basic read up, read down electronic scale systems

Options

- Choice of various different electronic scale indicators,
- Remote indicator and remote zeroing capabilities
- Hydraulic raise and lower discharge chute;
- Special discharge lengths;
- Hydraulic flap on discharge chute;
- Manual flap on discharge chute;
- Magnet in discharge flap;
- Diverter valve for tractor with only one set of remotes.
- Built-in knife kits
- Stainless steel liners

All LUCK//NOW mixers may be ordered as stationary units or truck mounted units.

Discharge Chute

Precise feed delivery — a discharge (shown at the left) that can unload at the rate you would like. The hydraulically driven orbit motor driving the twin 12" diameter augers can unload as fast or as slow as you require. Large clean-out openings allow ease of cleaning and draining in the winter months to avoid freezing.

Greasable bearings are set away from the back of the discharge for ease of replacement and longer life.

Want Good Alfalfa?

"The next time in rotation I'll probably ditch it out," he said of the nuisance. "Right now it is too time-consuming, and I don't want to disturb the crop."

A local fellow who needs haylage buys the alfafa right out of the field. Weimer said he lets the farmer harvest the entire 130 acres himself.

Weimer's wife, Sue Saylor, and her sister, Majorie Saylor, a few years ago took over their parent's Chippewa Road dairy farm, located a short distance away. They use most of the 40 acres of corn that Weimer raises.

Weimer and Sue live on the scenic Weimer farmstead along Rt. 281. Locals know the place well. You have to take care driving across "Weimer Flats" and at the "Weimer Crossroads" if a storm is brewing.

When the Saylor sisters have stockpiled all the grain their livestock will need, Weimer finds another buyer for the remaining high-moisture corn.

Conservationist, Weimer, the youngest of seven children, is a diligent caretaker of the topsoil where he is the fifth generation on the land.

"One of the main reasons I started raising alfalfa is it is a constant groundcover," he said.

With a good rotation, such as the corn he prefers, nitrogen is put back into the ground.

"You don't have to plow as much as with timothy and clover," he said.

Weimer avoids plowing as much as possible, explaining that shallow-root crops such as timothy and clover require a lot of soil turning.

8500 SERIES SMALL SQUARE BALER

HOLD ON TO MORE HIGH-PROTEIN LEAVES WITH THE CENTER-LINE DESIGN

With a Case IH 8500 Series Small Square Balers, your hay has a straight shot through the baler. From pickup to bale chute, all Case IH balers feature the field-proven center-line design.

Other baler designs force hay to change directions or turn corners, which can cause leaves to shake off or tear loose, taking your feed value along with them. Fortunately, the center-line design on Case IH balers helps your hay hang on to more of its protein rich leaves, giving you bales with more nutrition.

Here's how your hay becomes a solid bale built to stack like a brick: Hay enters the wide, low-profile pickup and meets plenty of crop-hungry tines. Then centering augers gently feed it to the prepacker chamber. Hay is swept in by a stuffer fork and compressed into a uniform flake.

Next the preformed bale flake enters the bale chamber just ahead of the plunger. Each charge of the heavy-duty plunger makes one flake until a square-cornered bale is built.

The result? Bales of consistent density and shape that pack a powerful nutritional payload. And you get rock-solid bales built for better stacking, storage and transport.

SMALL 14X18 BALES...BIG CASE IH QUALITY

From the smallest 8520 to the medium-duty 8530 and the deluxe 8545, Case IH offers you three choices in the 14x18 in. (36x46 cm) bale category.

All models boast the advantages of a center-line design. It's a difference you'll quickly see in consistent bale quality as you get bale after bale of solid, stackable, tied-to-last bales.

These three models of balers get the job done right with wide, low-profile pickups, high-speed, short-stroke plungers, constant-velocity drivelines, and reliable knotters and twisters. A big-capacity twine box boosts productivity, while a standard bale counter tracks the day's progress.

Optional features include hydraulic density control, high-flotation tires, hydraulic pickup lift, wire tie version of the 8545, light kit for night baling, quarter-turn bale chute, the 8511 Bale Thrower, and a bale chute extension with wagon hitch. See your Case IH dealer for full details.

There Are Plenty Of Ways To Ensure Good Alfalfa

LIME AND PH: THINK AHEAD
Mark Goodson, C.C.A.
Extension Agent Agronomy Soils
York County Capital Region
Agronomy Team

Watch the pH. The favorable pH for most crops is 6.0 to 7.0 and alfalfa requires 6.5 to 7. With perennial forages, it's easy to forget to lime.

Fields that have not received lime during the past three growing seasons are probably falling below the optimum pH range. It's a good idea to take a soil sample of perennial forages that have not received lime in the past few years. This will provide the opportunity to review other nutrient needs as well.

Remember, agricultural limestone does double duty. In addition to correcting pH, it is a fertilizer and provides the essential plant nutrients calcium and magnesium. Soil test recommendations are the only way to determine whether high calcium or magnesium limestone is needed.

Feed Your Established Alfalfa

According to the latest Penn State Agronomy Guide, alfalfa has the highest yield potential of all the perennial forage crops grown in Pennsylvania.

Eight tons of dry matter yield and 4 tons of TDN per acre are not uncommon when grown on deep, well-drained soils. Alfalfa has no equal as a feed for livestock or cash crop among perennial forages

Good Management No Accident

Alfalfa is a voracious feeder of when it comes to nutrients, especially potassium. Each ton of alfalfa removes 45 to 60 pounds of fertilizer potassium (also called potash or K₂O). If you have soils that are adapted to alfalfa and you want to hit the 8-ton dry matter yield, your soils had better supply enough potash to provide that yield.

At 50 pounds of potash per dry matter ton, eight tons would require 400 pounds of K₂O. Straight potash fertilizer is 0-0-60 and contains 60 pounds of K₂O per hundred pounds of fertilizer material. It would take 666 pounds of straight 0-0-60 to replace the potash removed by just one year of 8-ton alfalfa. That's a lot of fertilizer.

How much potash do your alfalfa fields have to start the growing season?

Soil Test Every Year

Don't buy fertilizer you don't need. While alfalfa is a heavy feeder of potash, the soil levels of potash may be built up by manure applications made for other crops and prior to planting the alfalfa.

The only way you know what the levels are is to soil test. The latest Penn State Agronomy Guide recommends annual soil testing of established alfalfa fields for top performance and stand persistence. Make sure potash levels are in the optimum range then add the amount the crop will remove.

More Than Potash

Other information provided by the soil test report is important. Alfalfa is very sensitive to pH and monitoring of lime is important throughout the life of the stand.

Also, boron, an essential micronutrient, is often limiting in Pennsylvania soils. Alfalfa is particularly sensitive to boron deficiency and yields will suffer if it is short.

The soil test report will remind you when this should be added.

Good Management Pays!

I suspect a lot of alfalfa stands "tucker-out" prematurely because proper management attention is less than it should be. At the end of the third year, a stand may look tired and the farmer figures it isn't worth putting any more into it. WHAT A SHAME! In many cases, a soil analysis the previous fall and a timely fertilizer or lime application would have kept these stands in tip-top shape.

For More Information

As usual, the Penn State Agronomy Guide is your handbook for basic agronomy knowledge. Also check the Department of Agronomy Web site. The web is www.agronomy.psu.edu. Click on publications, then click on Agronomy Fact Sheets. As always, you can call me at (717) 840-7408 or email mwgl@psu.edu.

Want Good Alfalfa?

The precious topsoil then is in a precarious position to blow away later by the wind.

"I plant oats for a companion crop when I seed the alfalfa down and I put some timothy in it, too," Weimer said. "The timothy sort of fills in around the alfalfa. It is shorter and less prominent than alfalfa. The timothy you will see only the first two years.

"The benefit is a quick ground-cover. So, in the spring, if you get a lot of rain, you aren't going to lose the topsoil.

Weimer sells alfalfa seed, too, which adds a social dimension to the business life he has lead for the last 15 years.

"I do it just to get out and see what other farmers are doing," he said, telling how he enjoys the exchange of ideas and observations.

The drought in 1999 made watching the growth of alfalfa quite interesting.

At a site where Weimer found a natural underground water course exposed by a cave-in at a county road, the root system of his alfalfa had gone several feet deep until it reached the source of moisture.

Overall, Weimer's alfalfa survived quite well during the drought, he said.

Weimer suggests anyone starting into alfalfa needs to select some of the better fields and follow up with soil testing and monitoring the drainage.

VICON'S KMR Trailed Mower Conditioners

A superb cut with excellent conditioning performance. Available in 7'10", 9'2", 10', 10'6" and 12'6" widths, Vicon is once again "Bringing Technology down to earth."

- Full swivel hitch - PTO stays in alignment when cutting square corners.
- "Free Float" suspension system - With 16" of free stroke in operating position, the cutterbar follows uneven ground and clears obstacles. The center hinge point also permits the mower unit to raise or lower at either side without adding excess pressure on the opposite side. The high-lift design gives swath clearance at headlands.

- * Wedge shaped cutterbar - Less ground resistance, eliminates "bulldozing" in soft ground conditions, and allows for a lower cutting height when needed.
- * 3 Blades per disc - Vicon's patented design puts 1/3 less load on each blade and an even load on the drive train.
- * Top service hubs on cutterbar - Easy Maintenance.
- * Labyrinth seals - A specially designed labyrinth seal on the hub of each disc prevents dirt, moisture, and all foreign material from entering.
- * Full protected cutterbar - Cutterbar is supported completely with an extra shell and additional wear strips. A reinforcement rod stiffens the cutterbar to prevent flexing.
- * Segmented intermeshing fully adjustable conditioning rolls.
- * Adjustable formed swath doors for fluffy, easy to pick-up windrows.

High Protein Milk Market

The only high protein milk market in Federal Order #4 was started in 1987 as a result of the cooperative efforts of Calvin Covington of American Jersey Cattle Association, Pete DeBaugh of Dairymen, Inc./DFA, Bill Dietrich and Lester Martin of the Cumberland Valley Jersey Breeders, and Jefferson Cheese in Hancock, Md.

Jefferson Cheese was willing to consider this venture for the high-quality and high-yielding milk that

In the beginning, high protein milk producers from Westminster, Lancaster, and the Cumberland Valley went together to make a tanker load of high protein milk. Today, there are 12 producers making about 40,000 pounds a day. All are in the Cumberland Valley between Newville, Pa. and Hagerstown, Md.

Jefferson Cheese is very pleased with the milk we are supplying. This load ranks as the cleanest and highest quality milk they receive and also yields the most cheese per CWT.

We were paid 15 cents a point above 3.2 percent protein and below 400,000 SCC. Above 400,000 SCC the premium was not available as this reduced the amount of cheese yield in the milk. This amounted to an extra $1,100 per month in 1988. We shipped 143,348 pounds in November 1988 and received a bonus of 76 cents per CWT.

In November of 1999 we shipped 342,000 pounds and received a bonus of 42 cents per CWT which amounted to $1,400 in extra premium. The price we receive was reduced when the Federal Order started to pay for solids/non-fat, and starting in January 2000, the changes in the milk marketing will affect this again, and we are not sure what the effect will be.

In the 10+ years that we have enjoyed this market, we have received an added value for our high protein milk of more than $150,000.

This has been a real-life demonstration of one of the possibilities that can result when people work together to create new and different markets.

We need to remember that ideally we should be capturing 90 percent of the sunlight that falls on the sward and allow the tillers to convert it to chemical energy in the form of carbohydrates and sugars.

The plant, really, is a minifactory. It takes in raw products and produces a finished product. It takes in sunlight, water, carbon dioxide and nutrients. The green leaf area produces carbohydrates through the process of photosynthesis. After the carbohydrates are produced, they got to one of two places – either to meet the growth demand of the plant or the consumer outlet, or it is sent to the storage site or warehouse for future use.

It is very important that we know where in a tiller this warehouse is located. If we allow this storage site to be removed in our grazing management, we are weakening our sward. If we do not correct our management to prevent this loss, we can totally change the species makeup of our pastures.

The storage site of Kentucky bluegrass is in the first 1 inch of growth above the ground and in the underground rhizome or stem. It is not generally removed with grazing and because of this fact it can survive close and frequent grazing. It is oftentimes the only grass left in our pastures under heavy grazing pressure.

If our stands are to persist, we need to manage our pastures to leave adequate stubble heights after grazing. Those average stubble heights are listed in Table 1 below.

The whole idea behind the stubble height is to leave the warehouse intact so the stored carbohydrates are available to generate new growth. If the tiller has green leaves left on it after grazing, they will continue to produce sugars and the warehouse is not as important. But if they are all grazed off, the warehouse is critical for energy for new growth.

New growth comes from the continued growth of the old tiller or from buds that produce new tillers. The buds get their energy supply from the warehouse. Until the new growth starts to produce energy, the warehouse is being tapped.

Table 1. Average Stubble Heights

Species	Height. (Inches)
Kentucky Bluegrass	1-2
Ryegrass	1-2
Orchardgrass	2-3
Tall Fescue	2-3
Other tall grasses	2-3
Small Grains	3
Alfalfa	1-3
Red Clover	2
White or Ladino Clover	1-2
Birdsfoot Trefoil	2-3
Warm Season Grasses	6-8

The other important factor to consider in this process of producing and storing sugars is that we give the plant an adequate period of time between harvests or grazings, generally called a rest period. During this rest period, a plant stores excess sugars it does not need for growth in its warehouse storage sites. In many grasses in springtime, this rest period can be as short as 10 to 14 days and may stretch out to 45 or more days in mid-summer. This rest period is controlled by how fast the plant is reaching an adequate grazing height, which for tall growing species is about 8 to 10 inches and in short growing species like bluegrass, it is about 4 to 6 inches.

It is best to control our grazing livestock and rotate them through our paddocks by monitoring forage growth as opposed to grazing by a calendar. Oftentimes a sward may be past its prime or not ready for grazing if we follow a calendar to control turn-in and turn-out of our livestock to a paddock. We need to remember to keep our swards in a vegetative state if we want to provide our livestock with high quality forages for maximum animal production.

We need to keep in mind that our goal is “to meet our livestock’s nutritional needs by using pastures as much as possible to lower our production costs and maximize our profits.” In doing this, we also have to remember that the forages have needs that must be met if they are going to continue to meet our livestock’s needs. When we meet both of these with our grazing management, we have a system that will sustain itself for a long time.

If you would like additional information on grazing, you can stop by any of our local county NRCS offices and discuss your needs with them. You can also give me a call at (717) 237-2221 or write to me at NRCS, One Credit Union Place, Suite 340, Harrisburg, PA 17110-2993.

I will also be at many pasture walks and grazing field days over the grazing season. I recommend that you try and attend these events. We all learn something as we share our experiences and knowledge at these informal programs out on the farm where it is all happening.

MODEL 200/400

The Model 200 is a highly maneuverable vehicle built from the ground up specifically for handling hay. It can be mated with all bale rack models to handle all sizes of square bales, large or small. Its extremely rugged design easily handles up to 2000 lbs. to 21' high or in the Model 400 version, 4000 lbs. up to 25' high.

MODEL 65/65-N

The Model 65 is specifically built to match up with all New Holland 3 bale wide stack wagons. It can carry 12, 15, or 18 bales flat or on edge depending on model. It is ideal for topping stacks or loading and unloading trucks.

MODEL 84/85

These models are extra heavy duty for the demanding application of carrying up to 2 big bales or 3 midsize bales at a time. They have additional bearings and extra large teeth that dig deep into the bales to insure a firm grip even with soft or wet tops.

MODEL N/950

The Model 950 is specifically made for packaging 10 bales together to form a tie package measuring approximately 6-1/2' x 8' ready to load directly onto a truck. This completely eliminates the need for someone to turn bales on the truck to get a full load. Also, it eliminates the need to hand stack at the barn. This is truly the only system that eliminates all hand labor.

PFGC Honors Several At Annual Meeting

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) honored several award recipients last month at its annual Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference here at the Holiday Inn.

The PFGC Awards Program was established to recognize individuals in Pennsylvania who have made an outstanding contribution to some aspect of forage and grassland improvement in the state, according to Marvin Hall, Penn State forage specialist.

Awards are made annually when there is a worthy candidate. Following are the award recipients.

- PFGC Special Award. The Special Award is the highest recognition given by PFGC, Hall noted. It is presented to an individual or company that has made a major contribution directly to the PFGC and an outstanding contribution to Pennsylvania's forage and livestock industry and/or conservation farming. The recipients' contribution may have been in production agriculture, industry, research, extension, teaching, or other public service.

New Holland North America located in New Holland is this year's recipient of the PFGC Special Award. New Holland has been a strong supporting member since the PFGC was formed in 1960, according to Hall. They have provided the PFGC with two presidents — Albert Best (1979) and Mike Bular (1988) — and numerous board members throughout the PFGC's 40 year history. In addition, New Holland was a financial supporter of the 1994 AFGC Conference in Lancaster and the PFGC 40-Year History, being written. New Holland has also been an active participant in every PFGC Forage Field Day.

According to Hall, who presented the awards, considering the many contributions of New Holland to the PFGC, both past and present, "it is an honor to recognize them as the recipients of the PFGC Special Award." Accepting the award was Richard Adams, team leader for research and development at New Holland North America.

- Research/Extension/Teaching Award. This year's Research/Extension/Teaching Award recipient is Penn Jersey Extension Partnership.

BOOST SILAGE MILEAGE CHEMGRO SI2000

Making great silage and haylage isn't easy. You have to beat the weather, the natural ups and downs of good and bad crop years, mold, and spoilage. Then you have to worry about what it cost you to feed silage for the value you received.

Chemgro silage inoculants SI 2000 and SI 2000ws can eliminate a lot of the guesswork. Designed to allow you to choose dry or water applications, either products will add quality and silage mileage no matter what your crop.

You get fast-dropping pH, rapidly-rising lactic acid production, and quicker fermentation than you find in both untreated silage or crops treated with other inoculant brands.

The result is silage that is more palatable for the cows, higher in total nutrients, and that contains more total digestible dry matter - a higher return on your investment.

Call us today to find out more about Chemgro SI 2000 and SI 2000ws silage inoculants and applicators.

ture in eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey, noted Hall.

Many programming initiatives, including multiyear and multidiscipline educational programs, were undertaken to address producer needs. Some of the most successful Partnership events include pasture walks, pasture weed control demonstrations, a poisonous plant ID course, drought management newsletters, the Penn Jersey Tillage Conference, the Penn Jersey Dairy Expo, and hay quality evaluation workshops. Participants reported that the programs were valuable to them and they had applied management tools learned through the programs.

• Conservation Award. This year's Conservation Award recipient is J.B. Harrold, Project Grass coordinator of the Somerset County Conservation District. As coordinator for Project Grass, Harrold is instrumental in the establishment of rotational grazing systems in western Pennsylvania, according to Hall. Harrold oversaw the original grant that provided cost-share funds to the Project Grass counties. Numerous grazing systems have been established under this program, with Harrold developing grazing management plans, providing suggestions on grazing practices, gathering data from the established systems, and preparing reports that describe the economic, nutrient management, and air pollution control ben-

According to Hall, nearby counties have seen the advantages of being a member of Project Grass

IMPROVE YOUR PASTURES AND HAVE TONS OF SUMMER FEED AS WELL

STEP 1 Plow or Roundup about mid to late May. This way you can still utilize your spring growth

STEP 2 Fertilize and drill in one (or a blend of several) of the fine forages described at right or plant "Master's Choice" Silage Corn. Corn does very well where pasture is plowed down. This may also help break up disease or insect cycles in old pastures.

STEP 3 Graze or cut sorghum sudan at 24 in. (Approx. 40 days after seeding and every 30 days thereafter). Warning: never feed sorghum sudan when it's less than 18" tall.

STEP 4 About mid Sept. plow or disk in manure and plant a high quality Barenbrug Grass Legume Mix. Always take a soil test before new seeding.

Graze lightly in Nov.

WHEN FERTILIZED AND GRAZED PROPERLY, BARENBRUG FORAGES HAVE MORE THAN DOUBLED MILK YIELD PER ACRE COMPARED TO TRADITIONAL PASTURE.

BROWN MID RIB (BMR) from Walter Moss Seed Co., Century Hybrid Sorghum Sudan. This premium forage has outstanding regrowth and tillering characteristics. The BMR trait increases the digestibility of the stems and reduces lignin by 40 to 60%. Because of this farmers will see increased milk production, or weight gains. The softer leaves and stems make for a more palatable feed.

MEGA GREEN from Walter Moss Seed Co., Delayed Maturing Hybrid Sorghum x Sudangrass is a very high yielding multi-leaf variety designed for hay or grazing. It has the potential to out yield silage corn. When left to grow it can reach heights of 12 ft. or more without making a seedhead. Here in Lancaster Co. I have not seen it go to head at all. Extra leafy leaves can reach 3 in. wide and 4 ft. long.

Both Mega Green and Century can be no tilled into old alfalfa stands after first cutting to double your haylage yields. Because of the high sugar content cows really go for it and milk well too MILLENNIUM BMR from Walter Moss Seed Co., Hybrid Forage Sorghum is used as a low cost high quality alternative to corn silage. In a 1999 on farm comparison in Ephrata, PA it out yielded corn almost 2 to 1 in dry weedy conditions at 25 tons per acre with 70% moisture. It was planted in rows with a corn planter and chopped with a regular cornhead when the grain was in soft dough stage. This hybrid has exceptional levels of sugars and NSC which provides extra energy and nutrition. Large grain panicles add to the nutritional content and energy of silage.

BARKANT FORAGE TURNIP from Barenbrug is a very leafy turnip that has won yield trials including one in Berks Co. PA where it was seeded May 18, 1999 and harvested June 30th and rivaled the yield of Sorghum 1999. It had a RFV of 216. It can also be mixed with Sorghum Sudan since Harrold was hired. As a result, the number of member counties is growing, as is the range of impact Harrold is making on grazing management in Pennsylvania.

Harrold was recently assigned 12 more counties, which makes him in charge of all the western Pennsylvania counties. When PFGC asked Harrold what he thought of this expansion, he just said, "More research!"

Hall noted, "We feel J.B. Harrold has gone way beyond the call of duty, and deserves to be recognized with the PFGC Conservation Award."

• Conservation Farmer Award. Dale Bracken has established a rotational grazing system for beef feeders at one of his farms. Working with the Indiana County Conservation District and the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service, Bracken expanded his rotational grazing system to include 16 paddocks that cover approximately 44 acres. High-tensile perimeter fence was installed as were two stabilized stream crossings and a spring development.

Bracken's concern about the damage beef cattle were causing to feeding areas during the winter led to his developing a feeding area stabilized with stone. A water diversion was installed above this feeding area to channel runoff around the site. A buffer area was established between the feeding area and a stream. Limited grazing buffer areas were established along both sides of the entire length of the stream in the pasture.

Bracken had a nutrient management plan developed for this grazing system and submitted the plan for approval under the Nutrient Management Act. He hosted a tour of his farm and the grazing system for Project Grass.

Hall noted, "Bracken's efforts in teaching others about conservation by example and implementing the many conservation practices on his farm makes him deserving of the PFGC's Conservation farmer Award."

Outstanding Pasture Producer awards:

• Don Bothell, Indiana County, has worked with the Indiana County Conservation District and the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service to establish a rotational grazing system for dairy heifers and beef feeders. In the pasture system, 41 acres are included, and additional cropland is used for grazing in the fall after crops are harvested. High-tensile perimeter fence (9,590 feet) and 8,900 feet of interior fence have been installed in the system. Two stabilized stream crossings have been installed to allow animals access to drinking water and pasture areas. Stream bank buffers have been established with the installation of stream bank fencing.

Bothell has worked with the Indiana County Conservation District to conduct a pasture management field day at his farm. This field day allowed others to see how the system worked and to ask Bothell about pasture management.

Bothell also allowed the conservation district to conduct an agricultural conservation practice tour for legislators at his farm. He participated by leading the group on the tour and explaining his pasture system operation.

• Glenn and Robin Gorrell, Bradford County, milk 185 Holsteins on 195 acres of pasture near Milan. They strive to provide all roughages from the pasture during the grazing season by timely use of nitrogen and reseeding of pastures. Glenn was the initiating force behind the Bradford County Grazing Network and continues to facilitate the 11 or so meetings they hold during the grazing season. He has served as a speaker at several local, regional, and statewide grazing-/forage-related events.

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

ED KONCLE Farm Seed Sales Manager P.L. Rohrer & Bro.

Allow me to introduce myself. I'm Ed Koncle, president of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC).

A native of Lebanon County, my career has been devoted to serving the farming community, a vocation I have thoroughly enjoyed for more than 40 years. I am the farm seed sales manager for P.L. Rohrer & Bro., Inc., Smoketown.

I am thrilled and honored to have been elected as this year's PFGC president, and I anticipate exciting times ahead not only for the council but our industry as well.

Our mission is "industry, farmers, scientists – working together toward a sounder forage program." We continue to reap the benefits provided by industry's many improvements in alfalfas, ryes, forage soybeans, etc. We've experienced the breakthroughs of university and USDA scientists. Equally important is the opportunity to see these new products and initiatives at work on your farms.

I encourage our farmers to work with suppliers, crop consultants, and county agents to host a field day or share your knowledge and experience at a crop meeting. I also suggest planting some test plots or, if you are a grazer or thinking about grazing, take in some pasture walks this season. Your farms provide a valuable testing ground, and we can all learn from you.

PFGC Ahead Of Its Time

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) – Today, organizations across the world are restructuring how they do business by including consumers of "stakeholders" in the decision-making process.

National funding agencies (USDA, NSF, NIH) are now requiring the involvement of consumers as a prerequisite for research funding.

The Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council was ahead of its time because it has always had farmers as members and farmers have always had equal representation on the PFGC board of directors, as do industry and scientific components of the membership.

Inclusion of farmers in the organization has always been a key strength of the PFGC. Farmers played a key role in the formation of the organization in 1960 by assisting with writing the organization's constitution and by-laws. The by-laws require that the PFGC's leadership be composed of farmers, industry, and scientist (educators). This is still true today, as farmers constitute one-third of the PFGC board of directors.

While other organizations are scrambling to build bridges and networks with their "stakeholders," the PFGC has had them as integral components since its formation 40 years ago.

To recognize this proud 40-year history, the PFGC is planning a 40th Anniversary celebration on Wednesday, Aug. 16 at Evergreen Farms covered bridge near Seven Stars, Pennsylvania. Mark that date on your calendar and make plans to attend.

For more information about the PFGC and its many programs, including the 40th Anniversary celebration, contact, Richard Hann at (717) 520-2349.

Starter Phosphorus And Potassium For Cold Soils

NORCROSS, Ga — Early spring seeding of cereal, oilseed, and pulse crops is critical to optimizing grain yields. Along with shallow placement of high quality seed, seed zone fertility for immobile nutrients such as phosphorus and potassium is important to giving the young seedling a good start.

Phosphorus and potassium are transported to roots largely by diffusion, the movement of nutrients to the plant root down a concentration gradient. As the phosphorus and potassium concentrations around roots are depleted by plant uptake, the solid phase components of soil replenish the soil solution. Diffusion is a short-range process, dependent on soil moisture and temperature conditions. The colder the soil, the slower phosphorus and potassium will diffuse, the slower that plant roots grow, and the slower phosphorus and potassium will be taken up by the crop. No-till production systems increase the amount of water stored at the surface of most soils by maintaining surface residue cover. While improved soil water leads to increased yield potential, it slows the warming of the soil in the early spring.

oped root system in the absence of adequate available phosphorus and potassium results in slow growth, reduced leaf size and tiller formation, reduced grain filling, and ultimately lower grain yields. Starter fertilizer placed near the seed ensures an abundant supply of phosphorus and potassium for crop uptake early in the growing season. It also is critical to balancing ever increasing nitrogen rates being used by farmers to achieve improved profitability.

Phosphorus is well known for promotion of early root growth and root system expansion, but potassium may be of even greater importance to root development. Cereal plants have two root systems: the seminal roots that emerge from the germinating seed and the nodal roots that develop from the crown to support advanced leaf and tiller formation. Surface soil potassium deficiency affects both of these root systems; however, it can have the greatest impact on formation of nodal roots critical to survival of tillers. High spring cereal yields are dependent on the early establishment and survival of primary tillers.

Root and leaf disease of cereal seedlings can be a further stress on crop establishment with early seeding dates. Research has shown that both phosphorus and potassium fertilization can be effective in reducing root diseases of spring wheat and barley. Take-all in wheat was reduced by 50 percent with seed-placed phosphorus, while root rot severity in barley was reduced by 10 percent in Saskatchewan research. In Alberta, barley grain yield losses due to root rot were reduced from 40 percent to 30 percent with the addition of phosphorus in the seedrow.

Should potassium be applied to high potassium soils? We cannot ignore our soil test results. If they indicate high potassium levels, a response to potassium fertilizer addition is unlikely. However, if yields are lower than expected, and crops are seeded into cold soils early in the spring, addition of potassium to starter fertilizers may go a long way in improving seedling vigor and early crop development.

The "art of farming" involves the integration of management practices and crop production inputs to maximize yields every year. Ensuring that a crop has a balance of plant-available nutrients from seedling establishment through to grain filling is critical to capitalizing on best management practices such as early seeding on the Canadian prairies.

Early Harvest Is Essential In Making Dairy-Quality Grass Hay

MARVIN HALL
Penn State
Forage Specialist

The use of perennial grasses for high-quality dairy feed throughout much of Pennsylvania is common. Unfortunately, the quality of the harvested forage is less than dairy quality.

The key factor in harvesting dairy-quality forage is harvest management.

Recent research conducted by Dr. Jerry Cherney at Cornell University showed that plant development varies with grass species, but forage quality decline was consistent across all species. In other words, the forage species is not as important as timely harvest in obtaining high-quality forage.

Reeds canarygrass, brome grass, tall fescue, and timothy were harvested at various stages of development and tested for quality.

According to Dr. Cherney, the research showed that fiber digestion and other quality parameters decline with increased maturity. The magnitude and rate of quality decline with maturity are much more important than quality differences between individual species. Cherney also suggested that producers should consider harvesting their pure grass stands in the spring for dairy feed before they harvest alfalfa, in order to produce acceptable grass quality.

In summary, the use of cool-season grasses for dairy-quality feed requires harvesting the grasses earlier than normal. Delay in grass harvest and not grass species is the major factor in producing low quality grass hay or silage. Consider harvesting grasses before you would normally harvest alfalfa to obtain high quality forage that is suitable for dairy animals.

Higher Profit Dryland Wheat: Get It With Fertilization

NORCROSS, Ga. — What are farmers doing to address low crop prices? Most are trying to cut costs and improve their marketing skills. Both of these strategies are important, but they must be combined with higher production levels. Selling more grain at a higher price will take a big bite out of the problem. This sounds simple, but how is it done? What are the risks?

Fertilization can increase yields. In dryland cropping areas, substantial yield increases have come from applying nitrogen and phosphorus where they are needed. The chances that yield increases will more than cover the annual costs of fertilization increase as soil nitrate levels and/or phosphorus levels decline. However, there is more to fertilization than just yield increases. Overall production levels are most important. Yields must be high enough to cover all costs of production, not just fertilizer. Soils that are managed at lower soil test levels may produce greater responses to fertilizer, but may not be capable of reaching the higher yield necessary to be profitable.

Fertilization can increase the selling price. How? Increased protein. Higher protein levels can dramatically increase the selling price. How much? Let's look at an example. Some data indicate that hard red spring wheat without fertilizer can have protein levels as low as 10 to 11 percent. When fertilized, that same wheat crop could have 14 to 15 percent protein.

What chances do you have of seeing yield benefits from fertilization? All of us are familiar with the whims of nature that make dryland cropping so challenging; insects, diseases, and, of course, rainfall. All of the factors can increase the risk of not getting yield increases from fertilizer. You can do everything right, but if the rain doesn't come, you won't be rewarded with higher yields. But what if it turns out to be a good year? Is your fertility program going to let you cash in, or will it produce disappointing yields? A study conducted on winter wheat in Colorado showed that in 10 out of 19 site-years, significant yield increases resulted from nitrogen fertilization. That means that fertilizing produced significantly more revenue about half of the time.

Horse Pasture, Manure Management Workshop Set

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — On May 17 and 24 the Dauphin County Conservation District will conduct a two-part workshop designed to give horse owners the basic knowledge needed to clean up muddy conditions, manage manure more effectively, and get the most from their pastures.

These workshops will be at the East Hanover Township Municipal Building in Shellsville from 7 p.m.-9 p.m. each evening and are open to any interested parties.

Pre-registration is required by contacting the Dauphin County Conservation District at (717) 921-8100 by Wednesday, May 10.

If horses are part of your life, you've probably spent some time sloshing around in mud, trying to catch the coffee colored horse, who use to be gray, chestnut, or palomino, or straining to move wheelbarrow loads of manure, or searching for one firm patch in the pasture to spread the evening's hay.

As you slip slide around in the mud, you may be asking yourself, "So what part of this is fun? The mucky paddock, the filthy horses, the exhausting effort, the wasted feed?"

Mud harbors bacteria and fungal organisms that can contribute to diseases such as abscesses, scratches, rain scald, and thrush. It is also a breeding ground for insects, who are at least an annoyance, and at worst promoters of allergic reactions and spreaders of disease.

When horses are fed from muddy ground they are likely to ingest dirt or sand particles along with their hay, making the setting for dangerous episodes of colic. Horses and people alike are at risk of slips and injuries on mud slick footing around the barn.

Not only can these soggy conditions be an inconvenience and cause serious health risk to your horse, but muddy horse keeping areas can also take serious environmental toll through runoff into surface water. The sediment and manure nutrients can negatively affect the fish and aquatic wildlife in streams, ponds, and lakes. The organic wastes can also leach into the groundwater, potentially contaminating the well water that you and your animals drink.

Horses and wet weather slop need not be synonymous. You can firm up the footing around your stable and in your paddocks and pastures, and in doing so, not only improve your horses' lives and your own convenience but also contribute to the environmental health of your community.

REDUCING THE POTASSIUM CONTENT OF FORAGES THROUGH FORAGE MANAGEMENT

Dr. Marvin H. Hall
Penn State Forage Specialist

In recent years, potassium (K) content of forages has become a major concern on dairy farms because it plays a major role in cation balance of the feed ration which is a contributing factor for milk fever.

Increasing K level in the soil, because of current manure management strategies and excessive K fertilization, has resulted in relatively high K levels in many of our forages.

High K content of forages increases the difficulty in balancing the ration with respect to divalent cations such as magnesium and calcium. However, there are a few management practices that can be implemented to reduce forage K content and minimize the potential problems before it occurs.

• Apply manure or potassium-containing fertilizers only where they are recommended through soil testing. When soil potassium exceeds recommended levels, it accumulates in forage plants without a concurrent increase in forage yield. This situation results in forages with excessively high K content.

• Allow forages to mature as much as possible before harvest. There are some obvious forage quality trade-offs associated with this practice. However, K levels can be reduced by about 25 percent for example, (2.3 to 1.8 percent) if alfalfa is allowed to mature from bud to 25 percent flower before harvesting.

• Harvest the forage as low to the ground as possible. The tops of forage plants contain higher concentrations of K than the base of plants. Harvesting close to the ground will result in lower K content forage.

• Practices that keep more leaves in harvested forage will reduce K content because K tends to accumulate in the stem.

• Include a grass in the forage mixture. Grasses tend to have lower K content than legumes. However, on soils with excessive K levels grasses can also contain excessive amounts of K.

For all these management practices to be effective a good system of forage monitoring and inventory must be in place. Segregating forage based on K content and matching this with the needs of animal groups is essential.

Food Retailers React To Wal-Mart, Serve 'Convenience' Culture

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Food retailers see a grim future, in terms of results of investments — only a 1 percent increase in food price and only 1 percent growth in population annually.

This comes at a time when Wall Street stockholders want to see 8, 10, even 12-percent growth in business yearly, according to a professor of food marketing at Saint Joseph's University in Philadelphia.

John Lord noted that food items already have 100 percent U.S. household penetration. The growth rate for most products "is simply not there."

So how to change that?

Lord, who spoke last month at the 2000 Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference at the Grantville Holiday Inn, noted that everything being done in supermarkets is a reaction to Wal-Mart — provide discount prices, service a "culture of convenience," and promote products that foster cooking as a hobby more than a chore.

This is all happening at a time when "sales of cookbooks are at an all-time high," Lord said.

As a result, marketers have had to realign their products to face a constantly on-the-go population. But people still want the ambience and the sensory experience — the sounds and smells — of cooking.

Lord said it is no longer considered "convenient" any more to take out a box of cereal, get a bowl, dump the contents, and pour in the milk. Instead, specialty boxes, packaging, and new ways of preparing are rising to the forefront of superstore marketing.

America is no longer a "melting pot" of cultures. It is more like a salad, he said.

Hispanics will be the largest minority by the year 2010. And packagers are looking to serve the clientele, promote the health of products, and provide convenience while not giving up taste.

Kids alone spend about $7.7 billion per year on food.

Increasingly, the emphasis on healthy products for a busy lifestyle will put more demands on food variety, ease of preparation, and overall food safety.

According to James Dunn, Penn State, with the Internet you can "find people interested in your obscure product," he said. "People are no longer restricted to local sources for food."

Optimize Forage Markets

KEITH OELLIG

Grantville

PFGC Conference

Oel-Dell Farms is located along Rt. 81, approximately 12 miles north of Harrisburg.

The operation began in the mid 1980s when my father participated in the Dairy Buyout Program. At that time the operation consisted of approximately 100 acres of hay land and 200 acres of marginal corn ground.

Today my operation consist of about 1,000 acres of hay, soybeans, and small grains. I have one full-time employee and two part-time seasonal employees.

Because of my farm's close proximity to the Penn National Race Track, a one-mile thoroughbred horse race track that houses 700 to 1000 horses yearly—I have concentrated my farming operation to meet the needs of this clientele.

In recent years the clientele has shifted their forage needs from an alfalfa-based ration to more of a complete bagged feed supplemented with timothy grass hay. The result of this has been a decrease in my alfalfa production acreage to more of a timothy-based production program. I am farming 350 acres of hay land.

Hay making equipment includes one hyaline, two rakes, two balers, a self-propelled stacker wagon, and seven conventional wagons. All hay at the racetrack is marketed by the bale, not by the ton. The hay stacking equipment requires a longer and heavier bale. This presented a marketing challenge when hay is marketed by the bale and not by the ton.

Pricing and service are the keys to my marketing strategies. By producing 90 percent of all hay that is marketed, I am not a hay broker. I am able to keep a consistent hay price throughout the year and from year to year.

As the horse feeding systems shifted from long hay to mostly complete bagged feeds, the bedding needs shifted from straw to wood shavings. In addition to providing hay at the track, the marketing of pine shavings for bedding material has become an important sideline for me.

I accept the manured bedding, brought to my farm by the horse trainers, as a component of my bedding sales. I utilize these shavings on approximately 500 acres of timothy and small grains. In addition I utilize poultry layer manure from nearby operations as a part of my fertility program.

Farming in the Grantville/Hershey/Harrisburg area presents many opportunities and challenges. A decreasing amount of available farmland and escalating land values is resulting in a smaller production base. But the increasing interest in pleasure horses in the region can provide alternative hay markets.

Food Retailers React

the industry as an attempt to "get better control of the (food production) system," Dunn said.

As a result, contracts are more the norm, which provide less autonomy, he said, for farmers.

But there is no logical reason for farmers to bear the higher risk of global markets. Risk should be passed higher up, to help farmers, whose business already exists under tight margins, according to Dunn.

For ag students at Penn State, however, last year "was the best year ever for finding jobs," Dunn said.

At the conference, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) and the Penn State-USDA-ARS Grazing Research and Education Center, three directors were elected to serve three-year terms: John Thompson, producer from Volant; Duane Pysher, grassland management specialist with the Natural Resources Conservation Service, Harrisburg; and Ed Koncle, president-elect.

According to Richard Hann, PFGC secretary-treasurer, there are 216 members of PFGC and 22 supporting organizations, in addition to Penn State personnel. In 1999, the PFGC co-sponsored the hay show at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, the 1999 Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference, the hay show at Ag Progress Days, and other events.

Scholarships totalling $750 each were awarded to two Penn State students. In addition, a student at Delaware Valley College was awarded a $750 scholarship.

A history of the PFGC is scheduled to be completed in July.

Seeding Depth Critical For Pasture, Hay Plantings

Establishing new stands of forage for hay or grazing requires precise planning. Ideally, producers should plan well ahead (six months to a year) of the planting season. This allows time to adjust soil pH and fertility levels and to control weeds. All of this planning and preparation could be wasted if the farmer ignores the basic seeding principles, such as setting a proper planting depth.

Many forages have small seeds that require shallow planting for rapid and maximum emergence.

We conducted trials at Rocksprings to demonstrate the effect of planting depth on different grasses and Puna chicory. Seeds (100 in each plot) were planted by hand to ensure precise placement. Seeding depths were 0.4, 1.2, and 2.4 inches on a Hagerstown silt loam soil. The number of emerged seedlings were counted at 35 days after planting. There was adequate rainfall during the trial to ensure good germination.

Percentage emergence of each forage is in Table 1. Seedling emergence was greatest and most rapid at the 0.4-inch depth. Perennial ryegrass had relatively good emergence from all depths. Although a number of seedlings emerged from the deep-planting depths, these seedlings were less vigorous than those from shallow planting depths.

Detailed experiments in the greenhouse showed that seedlings that emerged from deeper planting depths had fewer leaves, roots, and tillers than those planted at shallow depths (Table 2). Although a two-inch planting depth would be an extreme occurrence, improperly set planters and poor seedbed preparation can easily result in planting depths of 1 inch.

Seeding Depth (inches)	Perennial Ryegrass ^a	Orchardgrass ^b	Matua Prairiegrass	Puna chicory

Producers should remember the basics in planting forages: plan ahead, ensure a firm seedbed for good seed-to-soil contact, plant at the proper depth, and use recommended seeding rates. Consult the Penn State Agronomy Guide (<http://AgGuide.agronomy.psu.edu/>) for more planting method and seeding rate recommendations.

What About Dragging Pastures?

Jim Gerrish

Forage Systems Research Center
Linneus, Mo.

One of the questions that I commonly hear at producer meetings is: "Does it do any good to drag pastures?"

My usual answer is the universal extension answer for all questions, "It depends!" and that is usually followed by my question, "What are you trying to accomplish?"

Some day when you have a lot of time on your hands, think about all of the things you do during a day, and ask yourself what you are trying to accomplish with each task. The result may be a little scary.

What are we trying to accomplish with dragging pastures? The most common goal is to spread manure piles to accelerate mature decomposition and enhance nutrient cycling. Covering seed or disturbing a thatch layer are other common objectives. Dispersing manure piles may also lead to more uniform grazing. On some farms, dragging pastures is a tool to transfer funds to dependent children in a tax deductible manner.

Does dragging to scatter manure piles actually enhance nutrient cycling? For all practical purposes, no research exists to answer this question. From high school chemistry or building a campfire, we know intuitively that as particle size decreases, rate of reaction increases. Thus, if manure piles are reduced to manure fragments, they will decompose more quickly. The smaller particles also have greater surface area contact with the reactive surface (the soil). I believe it is a pretty safe assumption that nutrient cycling is accelerated following dragging.

The next question is, is the rate of increase in nutrient cycling economically meaningful? I really haven't a clue whether it is or not.

Some other aspects of dragging pastures may have economic relevance. The chain or flex type harrow is a very useful tool for bringing overseeded legumes or grass into better contact with the soil. The greater likelihood of the overseeded crop establishing is probably worth the cost of dragging. Mature dispersal comes as an added benefit.

Spotty grazing is very often the result of livestock avoiding manure piles. Scattering those piles can lead to more uniform regrowth and less selective grazing. To completely avoid manure-induced spot grazing is virtually impossible with any class of livestock which are in a production mode. Dragging pastures after every grazing period to avoid spot grazing is probably not economically feasible.

Timing of dragging can be fairly critical. Autumn dragging to break piles up going into the winter can result in much more even growth on pastures which do not receive nitrogen fertilizer. Nutrients contained in the manure are likely to be back into the soil solution for early spring growth if autumn harrowed. Manure piles that have dried a few months tend to shatter and scatter very nicely this time of the year. It also ensures that legume seeds contained in dung piles are more likely to come into soil contact in the spring.

Spring harrowing can either accelerate or slow pasture growth rate in the spring. Harrowing prior to or at green-up frequently accelerates pasture growth by disturbing the thatch layer and allowing the soil to warm up more quickly. We have measured three to five degree differences in soil temperature in side by side harrowed and unharrowed strips in early spring. But, if harrowing is delayed too long after early green-up, growth rate can actually be slowed due to damage to tender young plant growth. Delaying dragging too long in the spring can also result destroying legume seedling growing on dung piles.

Some concern has been expressed that dragging pastures may increase the likelihood of spreading infection of intestinal parasites to grazing animals. While this may be a concern in some environments, it is generally not considered to be a problem in the Midwest and upper South.

Manure in dragged pastures dry out very quickly during most of the year (May to October) in Missouri. Exposing more manure surface area to the sterilizing effects of solar radiation kills most parasites. Simply drying the manure out reduces the likelihood of some survival for some organisms. In cooler, cloudy climates, parasite persistence is much more of a problem. Parasite re-infection because of dragging is also more likely to occur with horses than with cattle due to the very severe overgrazing habits of set stocked horses.

We have kicked the pile around and thought about some of the benefits of dragging pastures. It is very difficult to say whether or not the benefits of dragging are worth the cost of doing it. In terms of economic importance, I would rate the benefits in the following order: reduced spot grazing (enhanced utilization rate is the economic benefit); improved seed/soil contact (the economical benefit is improved pasture productivity; and accelerated manure decomposition (the economic benefit is reduced fertilizer input).

Ag Progress Days Started By Council

Dauphin counties.

Then, in 1969, the PFGC decided to expand the focus of the event and changed the name to Ag Progress Days. The event continued to change locations each year until 1975 when the Ag Progress Days was in Mercer County. By this time Ag Progress Days had grown and become so popular that the organizing committee felt it was time to find a permanent location, which is the current site near State College.

The PFGC, which began 40 years ago, has played a key role in the Pennsylvania agriculture we know today. Events such as Ag Progress Days, statewide hay shows, and the Forage and Grazing Conferences all have their roots in the 40-year history of the PFGC.

For more information about the PFGC and its many programs, including the 40th Anniversary celebration, contact Richard Hann at (717) 520-2349.

PLANNING FOR THIS YEAR'S ALFALFA GROWING SEASON
DES MOINES, Iowa – Older alfalfa stands may not be providing optimum value per acre for producers. But there are a few easy ways to check stands to see if you're getting the most value from your alfalfa fields, according to an expert with Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc.

"Today's alfalfa growers and livestock producers can't afford not to get the maximum value per acre from their forage," said Carl Bannon, Pioneer technical information manager with the company's eastern sales area. "It is important to plant varieties that offer top yields and quality. And it's just as important to double-check established stands, especially if they are more than four years old. If these older stands aren't producing at optimum yield levels, it's better to rotate to corn or another crop."

According to Bannon, as stands get older they thin out, resulting in decreased yields and increased weeds. The weeds reduce the forage quality of the alfalfa and make drying to the correct harvest moisture more difficult.

It's relatively easy to check the health and population of older stands, Bannon said. Begin by counting the number of plants in one square foot at several locations throughout a field. The alfalfa population in an established stand should average at least four plants per square foot.

DESIRED PLANTS PER SQUARE FOOT BASED ON AGE OF STAND

A second method for evaluating alfalfa stands was developed by University of Wisconsin forage agronomics Dan Undersander and Dennis Cosgrove and involves counting alfalfa stems. This method allows you to wait until stems have grown 6 to 10 inches before checking the number of stems per square inch.

Stem-counting offers a more accurate idea of stand health and yield potential. If there are more than 55 stems per square foot, maximum yield potential can be expected. Stem counts dropping below 40 stems per square foot can reduce yield by 25 percent or more. If stem counts fall below 40 per square foot, consider rotation. You also can check the health of the stand by digging up several plants and checking for crown and stem rots.

"It is important to know if your current alfalfa varieties are producing yields that make a difference for your farming operation," Bannon said. "If they aren't, switch to another crop and consider using newer varieties for your new alfalfa seedings this year."

"We have a number of excellent Pioneer varieties from which to choose," Bannon said.

Once you have checked older stands and selected new varieties Bannon suggests you follow proven management practices to ensure quality alfalfa production.

Prior to planting, make sure that your soil pH measures between 6.5 and 7. Be sure you're getting good seed-to-soil contact by either rolling or culti-packing prior to and after seeding alfalfa. After seeds have emerged, scout fields to determine if weed control is needed. In addition, scout for potato leafhoppers when plants are 3 to 6 inches tall.

OUR FIRST Y2K GLITCH - POOR FERMENTATION OF FORAGES

Virginia A. Ishler
Program Assistant
Dairy And Animal Science
Penn State

Producers - dairy and beef - have been faced with ongoing problems related to poorly fermented forages.

The main complaints have been animal deaths related to clostridial spoilage (botulism) and a rise in the number of cows with displaced abomasum.

The mild weather of the fall and early winter has resulted in silages that are continually heating, have a short bunk life, have large pockets of spoiled material, and are showing a high pH. Problems will get worse as the weather becomes warmer.

The characteristics of clostridial silage are a pH above 5, ammonia nitrogen greater than 10 percent of the total nitrogen, more butyric than lactic acid, and a strong rancid odor. Unfortunately, there are no magic antidotes to incorporate into rations to correct the effects of clostridial fermentation. This type of fermentation can occur in any type of storage structure, including round bales. In many cases, animals will go off-feed or dry matter intakes will be reduced. This can increase the incidence of health and metabolic problems around calving and into lactation. The only solution is to reduce or remove the feed from the ration. However, in many cases this may be the main forage source for the herd.

Alternatives to feeding spoiled silage is to limit feed or eliminate it from close-up dry cows and post fresh animals. These animal groups are generally under the most stress and susceptible to feed related problems. Good quality mixed alfalfa-grass hay could be purchased to help dilute the effects of the spoiled silage. Any obviously spoiled material should be discarded and not fed to any group of animals.

More byproduct ingredients could be incorporated to replace some of the forage. If silages are heating, then more frequent feeding throughout the day may be necessary. Some animals appear to be more sensitive to heated silages than others. Any strategy to promote dry matter intake around the transition period should be implemented.

There have been some reported cattle deaths related to botulism. Botulism occurs when animals consume feeds that contain a toxin produced by the bacteria Clostridium botulinum. This has been seen recently in some beef herds, but dairy cattle can be affected as well.

In many cases, more than one animal becomes sick. They usually show signs of weakness, muscular incoordination, coma, and then death. How quickly animals show symptoms of being sick or die depend on how much of the toxin has been consumed.

A veterinarian should be called immediately. The suspect feed should be removed from the ration. Any ensiled forage with a high pH (>5.0) should be considered suspect.

Many of the animal health problems that producers deal with are forage quality related. This year's forages, regardless of silage additive use or proper filling procedures, are showing signs of poor fermentation due to unusual weather conditions. It is difficult to acknowledge that a forage product that one has spent time and money to produce may have little feed value.

PAUL CRAIG
Dauphin County
Extension Agent

Typically, in the early part of May, quite a few fields of alfalfa will show the typical symptoms of alfalfa weevil feeding. This damage is indicated by silver or gray cast to the alfalfa stand and is not observed until heavy feeding damage occurs.

The silver color is caused by the skeletonizing of the upper leaves and the buds on the alfalfa plant. It is not too soon to start monitoring alfalfa stands to prevent injury and yield losses as the alfalfa crop progresses.

The life cycle of the alfalfa weevil consists of four stages: egg, larva, pupa, and adult beetle. The insect overwinters as an adult in protected areas such as woods. Some eggs are laid in the fall but most are deposited in the spring after the adults return to the alfalfa stands.

The female weevil chews a hole into the alfalfa stem and deposits up to 25 eggs. Each female can lay up to 2,000 eggs in her lifetime. Young larva hatch in 7 to 14 days. The larva do not have legs, are soft-bodied (like a caterpillar), have a black head, are 3/8 inch long when fully developed, and are light green in color with a white stripe down the back.

First signs of injury are small holes eaten in leaves at the growing point. As the larva mature, feeding injury increases rapidly in localized areas. After feeding for 14 to 21 days, the larva move to the base of the plant where they form a cocoon and emerge as adults in 7 to 10 days. This typically occurs about the time first cutting is being completed.

Why Is It So Important To Manage Potato Leafhopper?

Dr. Dennis Calvin
Penn State University

While some new alfalfa varieties offer resistance to the potato leafhopper, most varieties do not. So managing leafhoppers remains very important in producing alfalfa in Pennsylvania.

As spring approaches, warm air will begin to move into the northeast and bring with it spring showers. These spring showers that originate in the Gulf of Mexico can also bring the potato leafhopper.

The potato leafhopper is a migratory insect that overwinters in states along the Gulf of Mexico. It cannot survive the cold winter conditions in the northern U.S. In the spring, potato leafhoppers wait for the right climactic conditions and then fly into updrafts created by strong storm systems developing in the Gulf of Mexico. The insects are drawn into the storm system and carried hundred of miles north and eastward. Computer simulations of storm movement have predicted that potato leafhoppers can move from the Gulf of Mexico to Pennsylvania in as little as five days.

By understand this behavior of the potato leafhopper, its arrival into Pennsylvania can be anticipated. In the spring, beginning about late April, major storms from the Gulf of Mexico begin to move north and east into Pennsylvania. The frequency and intensity of these storm fronts influence the timing and number of leafhoppers reaching the northeast U.S.

In years when few storms arrive early, the arrival of leafhopper is later and the numbers arriving are lower, resulting in reduced pressure for the insect. Under these conditions, only a few second cutting alfalfa field typically need an insecticide application.

However, the numbers buildup during the second cutting and a greater number of third cutting field require an insecticide application.

In years when early spring storms originating in the Gulf of Mexico are frequent, potato leafhoppers in general arrive earlier and damage from the insect is greater. Under these conditions many second-and third-cutting alfalfa fields require an insecticide application to prevent damage.

As the second cutting of alfalfa reaches about 2 to 4 inches in height, scout the field once a week. If a storm has just moved through the area, there is a good chance that new leafhoppers have moved into the field.

Arriving leafhoppers prefer the new regrowth before it takes on the dark-blue green color of maturing alfalfa. The wavelengths of light reflected from the young alfalfa plants that are yellow-green is very attractive to leafhoppers flying over the field. To a leafhoppers, this indicates that the plant is succulent and rich in the nutrients it needs for proper egg development and growth and development.

Older plants have harder stems and leaves and a lower protein content. Besides providing a good diet for the leafhopper, the younger plants are more tender, making it easier for females to penetrate the stem to deposit their eggs in the stem.

In summary, by watching the spring storms that move into Pennsylvania beginning in late April, the arrival of leafhoppers can be anticipated. Scouting after regrowth of the first cutting has reached 2 to 4 inches will help identify economic infestations of leafhop-per before significant injury occurs. It is particularly important to check fields after a storm originating in the Gulf of Mexico has just passed through, since leafhoppers are transported northward in the spring on these storms into Pennsylvania.

The adults are about 3/16 of an inch long, brown in color, and have along snout, characteristic of weevils. The adults remain in the alfalfa stand and feed on newly emerging shoots or buds until later in the season when they move into nearby protective areas.

Alfalfa weevils can be an important pest of alfalfa. However, not all fields will have populations high enough to warrant control. Each field should be surveyed to determine the degree of infestation and the level of damage before control decisions are made.

Target alfalfa stands on southern exposures close to wooded areas for a closer look. Economic threshold levels have been calculated for alfalfa weevils. A general recommendation for control is if weevil-feeding damages 30 or 40 percent of tips, larva are still present, and early harvest is more than a week away.

Mowing can occasionally eliminate the need for insecticides. Mowing exposes small larva to sunlight, which can dry them out, and plant removal can lead to starvation until regrowth begins. Pupa and adults will survive after harvest and can cause significant injury to newly developing shoots. Scouting after harvest in heavily damaged areas can help to determine if additional controls are necessary.

Refer to the publication, "A Pest Management Program For Alfalfa In Pennsylvania" for additional information on sampling and threshold levels. Refer to the "1999/2000 Penn State Agronomy Guide" for specific control materials.
